CARE OF BRUSHES.

Few housewives take proper care of the many brushes which are used for various purposes.

When brushes become filled with dirt and grime their usefulness is soon spoiled.

The pastry brush, which is made without metal wires to corrode, is familiar, but there are good brushes with bristles all around and a long handle which are excellent for cleaning out.

Then there are fine, long hair brushes for washing china; soap brushes for scrubbing soap through the strainer.

There are also brushes for cleaning out the gutter, and a variety of floor, window, and furniture brushes.

Many houses brushes and brooms do double duty. It is no more extravagant and indeed will be cheaper in the end to have a brush or broom for each particular duty and keep it in its place.
