CAUSE FOR ALARM.

How baldness begins.

How to prevent it.

Every person, male or female, shrinks from baldness. It adds to the appearance of age and is a serious disfigurement. In most cases are rare when the falling out of the hair may not be stopped, and a new and healthy growth of the hair promoted. The hair grows in the scalp like a plant in the soil. If a plant flourishes, it must have constant attention it must be watered regularly and find its food in the soil where it is rooted. It's so with the hair. Neglect is usually the beginning of baldness. Dandruff is allowed to thicken on the scalp. The hair begins to loosen. The scalp loses its vitality. The hair, insufficiently nourished, begins to fade and to fall. The instant need in such a case is some practical preparation which, supplying the needed nourishment to the scalp, will feed the hair, give it strength, and so produce a strong and healthy growth. All this is done by "Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor, the most practical and valuable preparation for the hair that can be obtained. It tones up the scalp, does away with dandruff, stops the hair from falling, restores the original color to gray or faded hair, and gives an abundant and glossy growth. Those who are threatened with approaching baldness will be interested in the following voluntary statement, made by Mrs. S. J. Green, of Spencer, Iowa. He writes:

"About four months ago; my hair commenced falling out so rapidly that I became alarmed and had been recommended Dr. Ayer's Hair Vigor by a druggist. I resolved to try this preparation. I have been now using it for three months, and am much gratified to find that my hair has ceased falling out and also that hair which had been turning gray for the past few years has been restored to its original color, dark brown. It gives me much pleasure to recommend this dreading."—S. J. Green, Alderman, Spencer, Iowa.

Those who are interested in preserving and beautifying the hair will do well to send for Dr. Ayer's Curebook. A story of cures of the scalp. This book of 100 pages is sent free, on request, by the J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

CALIFORNIA EXCURSIONS.

Via the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway to Los Angeles and Other Points in Southern California.

These popular every Saturday California excursions for both first and second-class passengers are "personally conducted" by intelligent, competent and courteous "conriers," who will attend to the wants of all passengers en route. This is an entirely new feature of tourist car service and will be greatly appreciated by families or parties of friends traveling together, or by ladies traveling alone.

The Midland Route Tourist Cars are upholstered sleeping cars and are supplied with all the accessories necessary to make the journey comfortable and pleasant, and the sleeping berth rate is but $6 (for two persons) from Chicago to California.

Ask the nearest ticket agent for a tourist car "folder," containing complete information about the Midland Route, or address "Eastern Manager Midland Route," No. 95 Adams street, Chicago, Ill., or Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, 410 Old Colony Building, Chicago.

The B. and O. and Greater New York.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad now runs its freight trains over its own tracks into New York city. Years ago a line was built from Cranford Junction on the Jersey Central railroad to St. George's, Staten Island, crossing the Kill Von Kull on a long bridge and trestle work, and all B. & O. freight, either inbound or outbound, was handled from that point. The recent extension of the limits of New York city has made Staten Island a part of Greater New York, and the B. & O. now enjoys the distinction of being the only line from the west, except one, which has its own rails into the city of New York.

Then there was an old gentleman who walked up and down in front of her windows every morning from half-past nine to ten o'clock, and again every afternoon from half-past two to three. He looked like an old general, and Dorothy felt quite friendly toward him because he belonged to her darling. Dick's profession. But even an old general can get monotonous in time, particularly when he does the same things day after day—and this one always did. After his early morning constitutional he invariably went in to his house and was seen no more until he came out to do his half hour of regular tramping again at half-past two. But after his second dose he always looked at his watch when an adjacent clock struck the hour, and then shook himself together and toddled off as he were going to town—going to his club, Dorothy thought.

But oh! dear, dear, it was all dreadfully slow, and before she had been a month in her new home Dorothy was pining, pining for some woman friend to talk to, to confide in, to be friends with.

Of course, to set off against this, there were the gay and glorious times when Dick came home, sometimes only between afternoon parade and morning stables, which meant a little dinner somewhere, a theater after it, and a wild scramble and rush to catch a train having Liverpool street at some unearthly hour in the morning. At other times, however, Dick managed to squeeze a two-days' leave out of his colonel, and then Dorothy felt—ay, and said, poor child—that life was worth living, and that she would not change her lot for that of any other woman in all the wide world.

"So, poor child, her life slipped by in a continual change from grave to gay, with bright spots of deepest and tenderest love set in a large surface of unutterable dullness and wearying depression.

"I wonder," she said one day to Dick, "whether, when we are able to be always together, you will get tired of me and if I shall bore you?"

"No," said Dick, promptly.

"You really, think not?" eagerly.

"I don't think at all," he said, tenderly, "because I am sure of it. What makes you ask me that, dearest? Have I ever looked bored or as if I were tired of you?"

"Oh, no, Dick, no!" she burst out; "only you were so good and kind to me, and it seems so wonderful that you who have been in the world all your life, should take so much trouble for a little nobody like me—I mean that I know nothing; how should I, after living all my life at Gravelehgh?"

Dick laughed aloud at the earnestness of her face and tone.

"My darling," he said, holding her close to his heart, "I have been no more kind and tender to you than you have been to me. You don't set half enough value on your dear self, the most precious self in the world. Believe me, a man does not care so much what his wife knows as what she is—and you forget, what I always remember, that you might have liked the other fellow best, and you didn't."

"I LOVE YOU."

"The other fellow," Dorothy faltered. "You mean David Stevenson."

"Yes, I mean David Stevenson," Dick answered. "Many a girl would have taken him before a poor pauper devil, who had to ask his wife to live in neog in a poor little hole like this. Do you know, I went round to have a look at Stevenson's place, Holroyd, the other day, and when I saw it—shall I tell you what I did, my sweetheart?"

"Yes," answered Dorothy, in a whisper.

"I went round to the churchyard where she lies, our best friend, and I thanked God and her, if she could hear me, that my dear, little love had given me her pure love in exchange for mine, and that Miss Dimsdale's wishes had never been left part us. Don't hurt me again by asking me doubting questions, my darling. Don't, Dorothy; don't, my dear."

"Dick, Dick," Dorothy cried; "I never will. I love you; love you, love you!"

"And you will always love me?" teasingly.

"Oh, Dick!" reproachfully.

"Even when——?"

Dorothy blushed, but she put her arm round his neck, and drew his mouth down to hers. "I shall always love you best of all, Dick," she said, "and however much I may love the child, I shall love it most because of you."

CHAPTER XV.

ABOUT two months after this a sort of avalanche fell upon the little household in Palace Mansions. It took the form of a letter from Sir John Aylmer, the old savage at Aylmer's Field, and Dick in his first surprise exclaimed, "Now, who the devil was to expect the old savage would be up to his sort of game?"

It began by assuring his nephew that he was enjoying the very best of health, that he had not had a touch of gout for something over three months, but that her ladyship was in exceedingly queer health—that she was indeed thoroughly out of sorts, and at present giving both himself and the medical adviser cause for the gravest anxiety. Then he went on to say that he had just had a visit of nearly a week from his old friend Barry Boynton—"That's Lord Skevveralegh," said Dick, as he read the letter aloud—and that Harry Boynton had just been appointed Governor-General of Madras, and that as he—"the old savage"—felt his nephew could not lose by advancement in his profession, whether he ever happened to come in for the Aylmer title or not, he had put in a good word for him with his old friend, with the result that Harry Boynton had promised to appoint him as his military secretary.

"But, Dick," Dorothy cried, "that means India."

"Not a bit of it, my darling," Dick cried; "I'll see the old savage at perdition before I accept it. I only go to India on one condition that I go as a free man; that is, with you as my acknowledged wife."

Then they read the letter over again and made their comments upon it—she with her sweet face pressed against his cheek, he with his arm close about her waist.

"The amount of delicate information he conveys is really remarkable," Dick laughed. "Dick, by-the-by, was on a ten days' leave, and was jovial and inclined to view the whole world through rose-colored glasses in consequence; "this is to let me know that I needn't expect to step into his shoes for many a day yet. Bless me, if he knew how little I care about it, one way or the other!"

"Nor I!" Dorothy chimed in; "except—except that we should always be together then, Dick," with a soft touch of yearning in her voice.

"But we are always together in heart, my dearest," cried Dick, fondly. "And my lady's health is causing him the gravest anxiety—Bim! We may take that with a grain of salt, Gravest anxiety! Why, if my lady were lying at death's door, that old savage wouldn't be anxious, unless for fear that she should get better. However, they've been in the world all your life, should take so much trouble for a little nobody like me—I mean that I know nothing; how should I, after living all my life at Gravelehgh?"

Dick laughed aloud at the earnestness of her face and tone.

"My darling," he said, holding her close to his heart, "I have been no more kind and tender to you than you have been to me. You don't set half enough value on your dear self, the most precious self in the world. Believe me, a man does not care so much what his wife knows as what she is—and you forget, what I always remember, that you might have liked the other fellow best, and you didn't."

"The other fellow," Dorothy faltered. "You mean David Stevenson."

"Yes, I mean David Stevenson," Dick answered. "Many a girl would have taken him before a poor pauper devil, who had to ask his wife to live in neog in a poor little hole like this. Do you know, I went round to have a look at Stevenson's place, Holroyd, the other day, and when I saw it—shall I tell you what I did, my sweetheart?"

"Yes," answered Dorothy, in a whisper.

"I went round to the churchyard where she lies, our best friend, and I thanked God and her, if she could hear me, that my dear, little love had given me her pure love in exchange for mine, and that Miss Dimsdale's wishes had never been left part us. Don't hurt me again by asking me doubting questions, my darling. Don't, Dorothy; don't, my dear."

CHAPTER XV.

ABOUT two months after this a sort of avalanche fell upon the little household in Palace Mansions. It took the form of a letter from Sir John Aylmer, the old savage at Aylmer's Field, and Dick in his first surprise exclaimed, "Now, who the devil was to possible, than they had been afore-time.

In his innermost heart, however, Dick was not so easy about his approaching interview with Lord Aylmer as he made Dorothy believe; and he knocked at the door of the old savage's town house with rather a quaking heart, and something of the vague dread which he had soaked and soothed away from his wife's tender heart.

Yes, Lord Aylmer was at home, and her ladyship also—and the servant, having no special orders about Mr. Aylmer, at once showed him into the pretty little room off the smallest of the two drawing rooms, and told him that he would inform her ladyship of his presence. And in less than three minutes Lady Aylmer came.

"My dear Dick," she said, "I am most pleased to see you. I did not know that you were in town. Is it true that Lord Skevverslelgh has made you his military secretary? I quite thought you had set your face against India at any price."

Dick Aylmer was so surprised that he sat staring at his uncle's wife in speechless wonder. She noticed his look, and asked with a laugh, "What is the matter, Dick? You look as if you had seen a ghost."

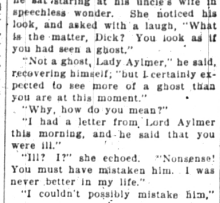
"Not a ghost, Lady Aylmer," he said, recovering himself; "but I certainly expected to see more of a ghost than you are at this moment."

"Why, how do you mean?"

"I had a letter from Lord Aylmer this morning, and he said that you were ill."

"Ill! I!" she echoed. "Nonsense! You must have mistaken him. I was never better in my life."

"I couldn't possibly mistake him,"



"MY DEAR DICK."

said Dick, firmly. "However, I'll show you the letter; there is nothing at all private in it."

(To be Continued.)

CHARACTER BY FOOTSTEPS.

Persons Who Walk on Their Toes Fond of Sport and Sentiment.

From the Washington Star: "In 22 years of constant walking about the streets on my rounds of duty," remarked an observant policeman, "I think I have picked up a few ideas about people and things generally, and I have come to the conclusion that the character of a person can be read pretty well by his manner of walking; that their habits and dispositions are marked very clearly by the way they appear on the streets. A careless person, man or woman; a slouch or sloven, walks that way, but those who have aspirations or energy will indicate it in the way they get about. A firm, determined person is likely to be firm and determined in his or her walk. Likewise the fop, the flirt and the person whose greatest stock is shown gives evidence of it in many of their street movements. In the case of the determined, energetic, the people who get there, as it were, their walk is marked by rapid, long steps, which are the same under all circumstances, while the fops and flirts change the style of their walk to suit the prevailing weather. One hour they will walk one way and the next hour their manner of walking will be entirely different, and at times uncertain and unreliable. On the other hand, those who walk easily and gracefully are very liable to be easy and graceful in everything else they do. I don't think I could even put any confidence in those who have a shuffling, secretive manner of walking, or whose every step looks as if they were laboring to get along at 3 all. This kind of person can not be depended upon, as workers or anything else. They are naturally sneaks, and deficient in character generally. If they are dishonest they commit their wrong-doing in a sneaking sort of way and never bold and open about it. A heel walker is generally a solid kind of character, while those who do the most of their walking on the forward part of the foot are fond of sport and inclined strongly toward the sentimental things in life. The springy walkers are the happy people, but are not strong mentally. The proud men or women walk in a way that bears out their dispositions. I don't think I ever knew of a sly or habitual wrong-doer of any kind that stood straight upon his feet. The best times to study the character of people by the way they walk is at night. You can then get your impressions from what you hear instead of what you see.

Scriptural Names.

We smile at such Puritan names as "Praise-God Barebones" and "Hew-Agag-in-pieces-before-the-Lord Smith." The Moors, it is said, give similar names, but of course the phrases are chosen from the Koran. They are quite as singular as were the Puritan names, and are said often to be a bad fit. Some examples of these names are given by Mr. George D. Cowan. More than one owner of false weights of our acquaintance rejoices in the title, "Slave of the Trustworthy." A former governor of Naha—detested throughout the province for his cruelty and extortion—answered to the name, "The Blessed One." There is, too, in Mogador, a loafer whose fiery eyes, dark skin, strong language and drunken habits have gained for him on the English steamers, where he now and then works, the sobriquet—"Devil," whereas in his family circle and among the faithful he is styled "Pilgrim of Salvation."

DIPHTHERIA IN WINNECONNE.

How It Was Stamped Out, After the Modern Treatment Had Failed.

Thirty-three cases of diphtheria were reported at Winneconne, Wisconsin, and the schools were closed.

Of the thirty-three cases twelve were subjected to so-called modern treatment; four of the twelve thus treated died, a death rate of 33 1-3 per cent.

Mr. J. Ulrich, a resident of Winneconne, had observed the marvelous success Muco-Solvent had met with and in his enthusiastic way induced many mothers to use it. His own family was one of the first infected, Muco-Solvent being used to the exclusion of everything else with splendid results.

Compared with other treatments, its success was so very pronounced, that Muco-Solvent was generally adopted, with the result that by its use alone the other twenty-two cases recovered, not one proving fatal where Muco-Solvent was depended on.

We recommend its presence in every home, for all throat troubles. In averting developments of diphtheria, scarlet fever and croup, it is unequalled.

Upon receipt of the price, $1 per bottle, the Muco-Solvent Company, 358 Dearborn street, Chicago, will express it, charges paid. This makes a splendid article for agents to introduce in their locality, as it is backed by overwhelming and convincing testimony. Forty-page book free.—Chicago Opinion.

There are times when men have to be treated like children, when they are very ill, by manner or by words, in imminent danger which must be averted first and explained afterwards.

Don't depend too much on popular sympathy. There are more teams in a peeled onion than in a public calamity.

If some men would get nearer to the Lord they wouldn't have to talk so loud when they pray.

A Good Dictionary for Two Cents.

A dictionary containing the definitions of 10,000 of the most useful and important words in the English language is published by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. While it contains some advertising, it is a complete dictionary, and is correct.

In compiling this book care has been taken to omit none of those common words whose spelling or exact use occasions at times a momentary difficulty, even to well educated people. The main aim has been to give as much useful information as possible in a limited space. With this in view, where noun, adjective and verb are all obviously connected in meaning, usually one only has been explained. The volume will thus be found to contain the meaning of very many more words than it professes to explain.

To those who literally have a dictionary, this book will commend itself because it is compact, light and convenient, to those who have no DICTIONARY WHATEVER, it will be invaluable. One may be secured by writing to the above concern, mentioning this paper, and enclosing a two-cent stamp.

Young Womanhood.

Sweet young girls! How often they develop into worn, listless, and hopeless women because mother has not impressed upon them the importance of attending to physical development.

No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodical pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick and needs motherly advice, ask her to address Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell every detail of her symptoms, surroundings and occupations. She will get advice from a source that has no rival in experience of women's ills. Tell her to keep nothing back.

Her story is told to a woman, not to a man. Do not hesitate about stating details that she may not wish to mention, but which are essential to a full understanding of her case, and if she is frank, help is certain to come!
