

CHARACTER SKETCH OF GEN. EMILIO AGUINALDO.

He Never Loses His Calmness - Just Now He is Concerned About the Safety of His Head - Why Filipinos Hate the Spaniards.

(Special Letter) F General Emilio Aguinaldo, late dictator of the Philippines, leader of a victorious army of insurgents...

He is short but well knit of frame, has the Japanese cast of features and form of head, and the casual observation would be strengthened by a bristly black pompadour of the kind so common among the Miskito's subjects...

He has a large, oval forehead, framed by a huge level-topped mirror that came from some European court, a couple of large iron strong boxes...

HEADQUARTERS AT CAVITE.

The only signs of war were the ends of sword chains that peeped through holes in the gingham coats of the officers...

Quoting from the budget it states that the Philippine treasurer pays a heavy contribution to the expenses of the government at Madrid; pays pensions to the Duke de Viana...

A BATTERY HORSE.

"I ain't no liar," said the veteran to a circle of comrades at a campfire, "and I'll tell you about a horse we had in our battery..."

"We was drilling hard every day, going thro' the manual of the piece in the sand, and we had a box for the bugler who would ring the call-reveille, stable call, boots and saddles, all that..."

THE PACIFIC ISLANDERS.

Nature supplies soap and scrubbing brushes. The fact is, however, that the universal civilization takes hold of the new task which conquest has set before it in the Pacific...

For lack of bathing frequently. This holds true all the way from Hawaii down to the islands of the Pacific...

PULLED THE LANSYARD.

our eyes to see what they'd be up to now. "The first fight was in an alley that night near the Cap, and I saw the saddle he went in by the rumpus."

"And after the scuffle was over where do you suppose we found the Cap's horse? Why at the field hospital with the brigadier's dress and his wound! Walked right back there, so the surgeon said, like a bounding jumper, and held up his leg for treatment."

"There was confusion for an instant, but the horse seen the situation and he was the thing to be afraid of. He sprang like lightning, grabbed the end of the lanyard with his teeth, swung round so as to be out of the recoil and pulled off that gun! It was the shot that saved the day! It killed the sergeant in charge of the enemy, his adjutant general and three aids—and yet some folks tell you a horse ain't human!"

"I ain't no liar," said the veteran, "and I'll tell you about a horse we had in our battery..."
