college and a question that interested them greatly. This physician was almost the best known in his specialty in the city, but his charges, in view of his reputation, have always been so moderate that his associates felt the need of protesting. But it was decided not to protesting. But it was decided not to protest, and the physician brothers in the profession. One physician in town has recently introduced a practice which is said to be increasing in popularity with the profession, and it is likely that the custom will be adopted widely by those physicians who have authority enough to a distribution of a drugstat who is forbidden by the terms of his greement to renew the prescription except upon a written orfer from the doctor. No patient can get his bottle or box refilled unless he brings the new prescription, which mean, of course, another visit to the doctor. The bottless are of anches the same medicined are renewed week after week, but with the order that comes only from the visit to the doctor. They are changed in few cases.

The profession has not protested against this new tanhon as yet, and it is not likely that it will. Fut it is Old Osthe in Court.

In Austria a Christian witness is sworn before a crucifly, between two lighted candles, and, holding up his right hand, says: "I swear by God, the Almsghty and it wiles, that I am to the court." I swear by God, and the court of the court. The court is a swear by God, the court. Probably the most curlous control is a deminister out from the court. The witness raises his thumb, his forefinger and his middle finger. These signify the Trinity, while the larger of the uplitted fingers is supposed to represent the soul of the witness and the smaller to indicate his body.
