To Obtain Emigrants for Canada. A special effort is to be made to obtain, among the presents of France, emigrants for Canada. The work of drawing them in has been entrusted to Dr. T. A. Henson, who is agent general of the Repatriation Society of the Province of Quebec, who has been trying his hand in that line for some time, with order. It must be said, conspicuous success. He goes to Paris as one of Canada's representatives to the exposition of 1889; but as he has other duties besides what can be seen and done in Paris, he will leave early, possibly in November of this year. He thinks the French peasant farmer offers an offer of 100 acres of land in Canada, and the hope of eventual escape from poverty in which he habitually lives.

FAIREST, DEAREST!

"Yes, Tom, she's a mighty good-looking girl; not to be compared, though, with others I know, and who are just ready to snip me up when I make an offer; but the fact is, and Joseph Fitzgerald stroked his mustache contentedly and fondly, as he added: "They all love me so, and I don't know what one to choose. That's why I remain a single man. But, really, I'm slightly tired of our city belles, and I've come down to get out-of-the-way place, instead of going to some fashionable summer resort for amusement."

The scene is a room in a country hotel, the speaker, Joseph Fitzgerald, in the language of the country, a "litty chap," with some good looks, a little money, and abundant capacity for love. The good-looking country girl referred to is Alice Devine, the belle of the village, who lives in the house on the hill.

Alice was an orphan. Her parents had both died when she was very young, leaving her in the charge of an old country woman who had been with them for years, and who since their death had taken care of the house and looked after the "missus," whom she fairly worshipped.

Tom Prince was a whole-souled, fine-looking country young man, and was Aunt Dinah's favorite, besides being secretly engaged to the country belle.

Joseph Fitzgerald had made the acquaintance of both Alice and Tom through a mutual friend.

Women, it would seem, whether country or city, are inured with an inherent love of flirting, and Alice had immediately commenced a desperate flirtation with Joseph Fitzgerald, who soon became positive that she was deeply in love with him.

"The city chap" was no favorite of Aunt Dinah, and the woman often took occasion to tell her "missus" just what she thought of him.

Tom, too, did not like Mr. Fitzgerald, but when he told her so she answered that he must not be jealous, for Joseph Fitzgerald had made the acquaintance of her husband, and, besides, they were not married yet. So poor Tom had to bear it with the best courage, and Joseph Fitzgerald had made the acquaintance of the "city chap" far away.

All this, it must be remembered, was told to Joseph Fitzgerald, who Tom listened to his remarks with feelings which he could not well define, but he answered calmly: "Well, Mr. Fitzgerald, wish you success."

"Thank you," returned the other; "she's a mighty good-looking girl, you see, Tom, old boy," patronizingly.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FREE.

One of the Greatest Offers Ever Made. The first five persons procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book from their grocer will each obtain one large 10c package of "Red Cross" starch, one large 10c package of "Hubinger's Best" starch, two Shakespeare pictures printed in twelve beautiful colors, as natural as life, or one Twentieth Century Calendar, the finest of its kind ever printed, all absolutely free.

Whoever procures the Endless Chain Starch Book will obtain from their grocer two large packages of starch (one of each brand) and a quantity of which are being given away. This offer is only made for a short time to further introduce the famous "Red Cross" starch and the celebrated "Hubinger's Best" cold water starch. "Red Cross" laundry starch is something entirely new, and is without doubt the greatest invention of the twentieth century. It has no equal, and surpasses all other starches of the United States. It has superseded everything heretofore used, or known to science in the laundry art. It is made from wheat, rice and corn, and is chemically prepared upon scientific principles by Mr. J. C. Hubinger, an expert in the laundry profession, who has had twenty-five years' practical experience in fancy laundering, and who is the first successful and original inventor of all fine grades of starch in the United States. If you would have the best, ask for "Red Cross" and "Hubinger's Best," which are the finest starches on the market.

The Jobbing houses all handle it, the retail grocer has it on his shelves, you find it in all the homes. Write for a list of all the names of the grocers who handle it, and the names of the jobbing houses who have adorned the walls of the home with the beautiful Shakespeare pictures which are being given away by introducing "Red Cross" and "Hubinger's Best" starch.

Traveling on the Burlington Railroad on the way to Denver, a little while ago, Atlanta, near Hastings, Nebraska, is noted as a point of interest because of the corn cribs built here along the tracks. In all there are twenty-four separate cribs, 12 feet wide and 12 feet high, with a total length of 2,644 feet, or a distance of nearly a mile and a quarter. This year's enormous crop (three hundred million bushels for the State of Nebraska) will test their capacity. Everybody seems prosperous in Nebraska, and the banks are full of the bankers, who find it hard to lend their money. Nobody wants to borrow it.

Almost anyone who can't think of anything else to do in his spare time, should read "The Life of a Soldier" by John G. Saxe. It is a story of a soldier's life in the army, and is a most interesting and instructive book. It is published by the State of Nebraska, and is available for sale at a low price.

THE TRAMP UNCLE.

The manner in which it is being dealt with in France.

The number of tramps in France is not proportionately so large as in this country, but it is large enough to attract the attention of legislators. The frequency of crimes recently committed by tramps of more practical benefit than the municipal ordinances posted at the United States customs or immigration. It imposes severe penalties on professional beggars or tramps who refuse to do more than beg, and who are unwilling to accept of the new bill deals mildly with the tramps and unfortunate who are able and willing to work. We always have one of these in our workhouses, and they are to be taken before a justice of the peace, who is to send them to the "house of labor," which every day in the month is open, where they will be occupied for some work until employment is found for them in private industry.

The number of tramps and vagrants have mounted, on an average, to 35,000 a year. Inquiry regarding the condition of the tramps in France, such as in the case of our workhouses, showed that in 1885 they had been visited by 46,000 individuals, who had spent one month in the workhouses, and were sent to all the gendarmerie, or police corps, through France, requiring agents to make inquiries regarding the individuals in their own district who were found on the public roads. The police were instructed to ask these individuals to produce documents or furnish explanations concerning their identity and profession, so that a kind of statistics and numbering could be obtained. In many instances, however, it has not been reported by the gendarmerie; nevertheless, it was shown that on a single day in 1885 there were 100,000 tramps recorded on the lists of the rural police.

COOKS ARE BORN, NOT MADE.

"Good cooks are born, like poets," said Major J. B. Quinn. "Once upon a time I bought a lot of turkeys for a government snagboat, and one of the prettier waterways, and on the way, not long afterward, was surprised to find lemon pie being served out to all hands on board. I asked the cook, 'Where did you get those pies?' and he said, 'I got them from a French leaver.'"

Tom could not prevent a feeling of indignation at hearing his and Alice so coolly of the girl he loved and his plans in regard to her. He felt an almost irresistible impulse to knock him down and trample on his sanctity by refraining from uttering the burning words that were on his tongue, and restrained himself sufficiently to say:

"How do you know she will accept you?"

"Are you aware," replied the other, "that my name is Joseph Fitzgerald, and that my family—"

"Yes, yes," interrupted Tom, "but are you sure you will be accepted?"

"Sure," the word uttered in a tone indicative of the utmost surprise at the very audacity of the inquiry. "Why my dear fellow, do you mean? Of course I am sure!"

Tom could not help saying as he arose and left.

"Mr. Fitzgerald, there is such a thing as being too sure. Remember that too sure!"

"Poor fellow! Jealous!" were Mr. Fitzgerald's comments.

Tom immediately after leaving the city chap, started as quickly as his feet could carry him to Alice. He found her at home.

"Now, see here, Alice," he said, "you know I love you, and you have promised to marry me, but if you love that Fitzgerald better than you love me, why say so, and—"

"Give up flirting with him, for I can not stand it any longer!"

"Why, Tom, dear, you're jealous again. I'm ashamed of you, I am!"

"It's enough to make a saint jealous," growled Tom. "Why, Alice, I have been compelled to sit and listen to that man talk in the coolest way about you. He told me he was coming here tonight, and he said he would give up flirting with him, for I can not stand it any longer!"

Friend of Dickens Dead.

London Correspondence to Chicago Record: An old friend of Charles Dickens has just died. His name was John Chipperfield and he held that post of lampman and subsequently lamp inspector at the Tisbury railway station, Dickens, who was a frequent traveler from London to Tisbury on the South End railroad, made his acquaintance and spent many an hour with him. He immortalized Chipperfield as Lamps in the Christmas number of All Year Round, entitled "Mugby Junction."

Non-Territorial Expansion.

Means paying rent for a poor farm. Now is the time to secure a good farm on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway in Marinette County, Wisconsin, where the crops are of the best, work plenty, fine markets, excellent climate, pure water, land sold cheap and on long time. Why rent a farm when you can buy one for less than you pay for rent? Address C. E. Hollins, agent, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
