RECENT INVENTIONS.

An Australian has patented a simple fastener for shoes, consisting of metallic strips attached to the edges of the upper, with a sliding clasp connecting the two strips, being pulled up to the top of the shoe when it is desired to fasten it in place.

The exhaust on steam yachts is muffled by a southerner's device, the pipe through which the steam passes entering the channel in the bottom of the boat to be cooled by the water after which it passes off through a valve under the propeller.

Seamstresses will appreciate a new fan attachment for sewing machines, a vertical shaft being set in a frame on the machine table, with a friction wheel at the bottom of the shaft, engaging the flywheel of the machine, an ordinary fan being fastened to the top of the shaft.

A knee pad has been patented for use when scrubbing floors and performing other work in a kneeling position, a metallic base being provided with extensions on two opposite sides, from which a sheet of fabric is suspended a short distance above the base to support the knee.

BY A WOMAN.

Nearly all the girls give up their music when they marry. Why is it that every dish that is worth eating is unwholesome? The first baby is totally unlike any other baby that ever was born.

Some charming and inexpensive designs in monograms are being shown at the stationers'. If husbands and wives will quarrel they should avoid boarding houses, apartments and flats.

"Tar balls are beginning to play a conspicuous part in the window decorations of the corner drug store. Want of air kills a man in five minutes, want of sleep in ten days and want of water in a week. I've been told."

How many people can find a reference in the Bible without first looking at the table to see just where the book comes?

One begins to believe in the decadence of civility when the number of men who sit while the women stand is increasing daily in the street cars. The men give the blame to the "new women."

GRAINS OF WISDOM.

The way to get out of self-love is to love God.—Phillips Brooks. Steam is no stronger now than it was 1,000 years ago, but it is put to better uses.—Emerson.

From the sternal goodness gone alone can proceed. Fear not, therefore, for you shall find mercy at the last.—Omar Khayyam.

The common opportunity comes, as the divinest opportunity in the whole history of the world came, cradled in obscurity.—Christian Union.

ALMS TO ROTHSCHILD.

How an Artist's Head Was Cast Upon the Waters and Returned.

One of the closest friends of Baron Rothschild of Paris was Carlos de Yrujo, the artist, say writer for Harper's Round Table. During the entire course of a certain large dinner party the great financier was looking at him with a most intent and peculiar expression.

After the coffee and cigars the Baron drew his friend aside and said: "My dear fellow, pray tell me why you have stared at me so peculiarly this evening?"

"I'll tell you with pleasure," answered Duran; "I am painting a beggar for the season, and have looked all over Paris for a suitable head to draw from. Yours is the ideal."

"Rothschild laughed heartily and promised to sit for his friend in suitable attire on the following day. During the progress of the sitting, you will recall, one Duran's pupils came into the room. Naturally he had not been in a position to meet people of Baron Rothschild's importance, and so did not know that the beggar's miserable rags, wan face and wistful expression appealed deeply to the young man's sympathies.

Waiting until the beggar had left, the pupil took a frame from his vest pocket and held it out behind his back to the model, who, selected it with feigned astuteness, and then the beggar's child made inquiries of Duran, concerning the philanthropist, and was informed that he was a student of great prominence among the poorest of the inhabitants of the Latin Quarter.

Some six months after this occurrence the young man received a note from the beggar, in which he stated that he had given you in charity to a beggar in the studio of Mr. Duran has been invested by us, and we take pleasure in referring to you your checks for 2,000 francs, the principal and interest of the same. Yours, etc., Rothschild & Co.

WHAT IS TASTED? Tests indicating that the Sense Does Not Exist. The University of Iowa has made some recent experiments which would almost seem to prove that the sense of taste, as we know it, is produced merely by a combination of the senses of sight, feeling and smell.

The theory that the sense of taste is produced by a combination of the senses of sight, feeling and smell, has been supported by a series of experiments conducted by the University of Iowa.

When a subject was asked to taste a piece of sugar, he was told to look at it, touch it, and smell it. He then reported that it tasted sweet.
