In Memoriam

Deuell Rockwell, who fuesday, Jan. 31, 1899:

Echoes in another home.

He has gone to be with Jesus,
All this world cannot compare
With one day spent in that jetty,
With the angels over there.
Earthly flowers bloom and perish
Young grow old and time goes.
He will be the same forever,
There no changes ever come.

There no changes ever come.
Outld he speak to you, dear father
I think to you he would sty:
It was my mother s volce
I theard when called away."
O her all Heaven was not complet
Until her Deuell came,
and now that I am with her,
We often speak your name.

We often speak your name.
And, father dear, this life is short,
The time will not be long
Before my darling aunt and you
Will Join the happy throng.
Toil not for earthly treasures,
That only rust and waste,
But take some other to your heart
To fill my vacant place.

to ni my vacant piace. I would not be fregotien, Since I have passed away, I am pour son forever, You will meet me "some sweet day." On schoolmates, dear and many, I could count them by the score, You will meet together just the same, But I can come no more.

I loved this life with all its J by,
With all its strife and haste,
I was looking for the time to come
When I could fill a place.
But that dream I had, dear father,
Before my final sleep,
I was too beautiful to tell,
Too beautiful to keep.

And when the earth is clothed in white, Or the roses are in bloom, I shall not feel the cold, father. For silent is the tomb, Just plant some flowers above my nead, In the bright warm summer sun, And trust in Him who doet lim well. And say "Thy Will be Done."
