It is the height of art to conceal art.

That is the best part of beauty which picture cannot express.—Bacon.

picture cannot express.—Bacon.

Bettier to be despined for too auxious supprehensions than ruined by too condent a security.—Burke.

If men wish to be held in esteem hey must associate only with those that are estimable.—La Buryer.

The two most engaging qualities of a author are to make new things amiliar and familiar things new—obnson.

The nurse on duty in a certain London hospital was giving the little ones their last meal for the day. All save there is a many the little ones their last meal for the day. All save them are the little ones their last meal for the day. All save them made in the Klondike. For most property of the little impatient, by the little impatient, by the little impatient, by the little impatient, Dorothy?" inquired the kindly marse, with just a little timpe of correction in her tone. "No, I'm not," restricted Dorothy, promptly. "I'm a little she patient?

Playwright David Belasco was entering the Garrick theater in New York the other night, when a diminush houted: "Wuxtry! Terribe him and shouted: "Wuxtry! Terribe and houted: "Wuxtry! Terribe to President McKlisley!" "Polar one!" said Belasco, fumbling in his pocket or change; "what kind of an accident did he meet with!" "Nearly drowned, if" "repiled the urchin, his eyes dancing; "he fell through a mattress into the spring." Belasco gave him an ickel.
