

Leyden Jar Girl Who Attracts All Manner of Things.

Dr. Wolfram, a reputable physician in Augsburg, Germany, claims to have under his surveillance the "most notable and extraordinary example of an electrical girl, embodying in her small frame the elements of a powerful magnet and of a first-class thunder storm." The doctor says that magnetic science never before had the good fortune to take cognizance of a case presenting such marvellous phenomena...

The man has one game fishing and there isn't one in sight. Consequently of her wiles they're out of respect, she says. So it makes the maiden full of mad, and also spleen and spite, For she's now the only apple on the beach.

"My dear," said Mr. Boobling, glancing up from his paper, "I remark a considerable decline in the stock market. If this continues much longer, you will have to do without your new bonnet." "Indeed, I shall not, Mr. Boobling," rejoined his wife, "for the last four years you have remarked the very same thing at just this time when the spring styles commenced to appear, and I have had, unmade and remade my old hat many enough. This time I must have a new hat." "But you look so charming in the one, it becomes you so well," said Mr. Boobling, having as usual recourse to flattery to pass the time when the spring styles commenced to appear...

STAMMERING MAY BE CURED. Even the Most Obstinate Cases May Be Overcome by Deliberate Speech.

Stammering is a purely nervous disease," said a prominent physician. It is not a hereditary defect, but a result of excessive nervousness. It can be cured by the simplest means. It has been found upon investigation that very beneficial results follow special treatment. Some of the methods in vogue in existence in the United States are of the nature of schools or institutions where the student for this purpose can attend at home with good effect where the affection takes a mild form...
