Forsaking all Others

By AMELIA DUCHEMIN

CHAPTER II.—(Continued.)

He came into a flat at last, as fine a specimen of young manhood as one would wish to see, with his tall, erect figure, his clear eyes as dark as Helen's own. As he lifted his cap and walked to meet her Helen held the [illegible] and [illegible] smile [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[