How the Flyer

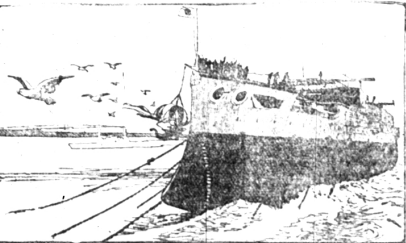

Leaped into

Ohio River.

This picture shows the Cleveland and Pittsburgh Railroad Flyer, which is a small, narrow boat used for launching larger vessels into the Ohio river. It is a simple, functional design with a flat deck and a small cabin.

The flyer is shown in the process of being launched into the Ohio river. The boat is being pushed by a larger vessel, and it is seen leaping into the water. The scene is set on a wide river with a forested bank in the background.

Launching Japanese War Ship

The launch at Harrow, England, of the largest battleship in the world, the new Japanese man-of-war Mikasa. The interesting point of the ceremony was the release of twelve pigeons from a note on a small circular platform attached to a red and white balloon. This is a characteristic of the launching of Japanese battleships. In Japan doves are substituted.
