Wisdom About Women.

Respect always a silent woman; great is the wisdom of the woman that holdeth her tongue.

A vain woman is to be feared, for she will sacrifice all for her pride.

A haughty woman stumbles for she can not see what may be in her way.

Trust not the woman that thinketh more of herself than another, mercy will not dwell in her heart.

The gods honor her who thinketh long before opening her lips.

A woman that is not loved is a kite from which the string has been broken; she driveth with the wind, and cometh to a long fall.

A woman that respects herself is more beautiful than a single star; more beautiful than many stars at night.

Woman is the ease for that which pains the father; she is balm for his troubles.

A woman who mistakes her place can never return to where she first was; the path has been covered up from her eyes.

A woman desirous of being seen by men is not trustworthy; fear her glance.

Give heed to her to whom children have come; she walks in the sacred ways and locks not love.

A mother not spoken well of by her children is an enemy of the state; she should not live within the kingdom's wall.

A woman without children has not yet the most precious of her jewels.

Give heed to the voice of an old woman; sorrow has given her wisdom.

The minds of women are quicker and their hearts of wax.

A beautiful woman is content to be; a plain one tries to do; she is beautiful [illegible] than the flowers of the field.

Like sheep that lie together are many women come together for mischief.

The happiest mother of daughters is she who has only sons.

"The temperance question is destined to create a vast deal of strife in the world. Animosities and antagonisms will grow out of it. Churches will be divided by it and political parties broken asunder. Disputes of neighborhoods will not be spared, and brother will be arrayed against brother. It is the oldest, and at the same time the newest, question that agitates society. Men have sought out many inventions in the form of laws and regulations for the control of the traffic, but all are failures. Among the failures none have ever been worse than the license system. It is a direct appeal to the weakness of human nature. The liquor tax appeals to men's avarice and the legalized saloon to his appetite. Both create temptations that mortals are unable to resist. Drunkards have never been saved by tax laws, nor groggeries destroyed. Little saloons may have been crowded out, but the big saloons have engulfed them. The license system fosters the traffic, gives the traffickers standing, interests them in politics, turns their noses into palaces of sin, [illegible] and makes of them [illegible] and stones [illegible] arms for defense against the assaults of the temperance people.
