I Am Not a Bald Head

"I had a very severe sickness that took off all my hair. I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor and am glad to say that it brought my hair back again and I am not today obliged to be classed among the bald-heads."
—W. D. Quinn, Marseilles, Ill., Aug. 25, 1899.

Makes Hair Grow

One thing is certain, Ayer's Hair Vigor makes the hair grow. This is because it is a hair food. If it were a hair stimulant simply, it could not do this. You must have food to have stimulants can not take its place. Ayer's Hair Vigor feeds the hair at the roots. It could not do differently, for it's Nature's plan. It stops falling of the hair, it makes scant hair full, and it always restores color to gray hair.

Write the Doctor.

NOT the CHEAPEST but the BEST

JOHN M. SMYTH CO.,
Order by mail or 1 to 1000 W. Madison St.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Highest Grade Moderate Prices

Schaefer Pianos

Second only to the Highest Class Pianos Ever Made

Beauty of design,
Powerful singing quality of tone,
Extreme durability.

Schaefer Piano Mfg. Co.
215 Wabash Ave.,
CHICAGO.

Ladies and Children Without Escort

En route to California should join one of the Santa Fe Route personally conducted excursions.

The petty cares and annoyances of long distance travel are taken off their minds by a special courteous conductor. No extra charge.

Full information cheerfully furnished.

T. A. GRADY,
Passenger Traffic Manager
The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway
New Main Street, Chicago.

FOR EVERY HOUSEKEEPER.

The Gem Selfheating Flat Iron and Stove combined is a new invention of great value to housekeepers. It gives just desired heat, is odorless, safe, simple, complete; saves time, labor, health, fuel; 2 cents runs one all day. It supersedes stove. Once used it is indispensible. AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE. Anyone can sell it. An investment will pay you. GEM FLAT IRON CO., KALAMAZOO, Mich.

PARALYSIS La motor Ataxia cured at last. Doctors DeLaMATER'S BLOOD AND NERVE FOOD Write for book and proofs. DeLAMATER, 224 N. 10th St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

A valuable book for plant, flower and vegetable growers. Free for the asking. Address J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Box 3, Marblehead, Mass.

DROPSY NEW DISCOVERY. Gives quick relief and cures worst cases in 10 to 20 days. Send for free book of testimonials and 10 days' treatment. Dr. H. H. GREEN'S SONS, Box B, Atlanta, Ga.

LAMB'S [illegible]

Thompson's Eye Water

When answering Advertisements Kindly Mention This Paper.

BARBER'S BROTHER.

The barber's second brother—that was what he gave himself out to be, not that the barber knew anything about him. He appeared at the little shop one day at noon when the barber's assistant was out.

"Shave me," he said and settled himself in the chair. He had was a full black one and handsome.

"You wish to sacrifice your whiskers, sir?"

Every hair down to the roots. And you may also cut my hair, and do it rather close." The hair was luxuriant and a degree longer than that worn by most gentlemen of fashion.

When the barber had completed his appointed tasks, his patron arose, shook himself, and laid ten $100 bills on the counter which contained the grindstone and the bay rum.

"I like your conversation, sir, and I like the way you cut hair. I am to be in Johannesburg for a few days. If you will accept a position as my valet, I will pay you $100 a week and all your expenses."

The barber had counted the bills. They were the first he had ever seen. He looked at the one who had given them to him, but he could not speak. Finally he found his voice.

"Thank you. You have been an excellent brother."

The man lived with the barber and his wife six years, slept in the little bedroom off their kitchen, ate at their table with them, walked with them to the park, and referred to them as his folks. At the end of those six years he remained as much a mystery as the day he came, but he had inspired affection and even gratitude in the hearts of the barber and his wife, who by all reckoning should have disliked him mightily. One day he disappeared.

My brother has gone back to the stage," explained the barber. He said it sadly. He was really lonesome. He tried to keep up the habit of reading evenings, but he could not be interested. He endeavored to imitate the swell look as if had for this no purpose, but he could not succeed. Trade languished, and he found fault with him in the manner which rendered the quarrels and the bay rum.

"Shave me," he said, and settled himself in the chair. He had was a full black one and handsome.

"You wish to sacrifice your whiskers, sir?"

Every hair down to the roots. And you may also cut my hair, and do it rather close." The hair was luxuriant and a degree longer than that worn by most gentlemen of fashion.

When the barber had completed his appointed tasks, his patron arose, shook himself, and laid ten $100 bills on the counter which contained the grindstone and the bay rum.

"I like your conversation, sir, and I like the way you cut hair. I am to be in Johannesburg for a few days. If you will accept a position as my valet, I will pay you $100 a week and all your expenses."

The barber had counted the bills. They were the first he had ever seen. He looked at the one who had given them to him, but he could not speak. Finally he found his voice.

"Thank you. You have been an excellent brother."

The man lived with the barber and his wife six years, slept in the little bedroom off their kitchen, ate at their table with them, walked with them to the park, and referred to them as his folks. At the end of those six years he remained as much a mystery as the day he came, but he had inspired affection and even gratitude in the hearts of the barber and his wife, who by all reckoning should have disliked him mightily. One day he disappeared.

My brother has gone back to the stage," explained the barber. He said it sadly. He was really lonesome. He tried to keep up the habit of reading evenings, but he could not be interested. He endeavored to imitate the swell look as if had for this no purpose, but he could not succeed. Trade languished, and he found fault with him in the manner which rendered the quarrels and the bay rum.

"Shave me," he said, and settled himself in the chair. He had was a full black one and handsome.

"You wish to sacrifice your whiskers, sir?"

Every hair down to the roots. And you may also cut my hair, and do it rather close." The hair was luxuriant and a degree longer than that worn by most gentlemen of fashion.

When the barber had completed his appointed tasks, his patron arose, shook himself, and laid ten $100 bills on the counter which contained the grindstone and the bay rum.

"I like your conversation, sir, and I like the way you cut hair. I am to be in Johannesburg for a few days. If you will accept a position as my valet, I will pay you $100 a week and all your expenses."

The barber had counted the bills. They were the first he had ever seen. He looked at the one who had given them to him, but he could not speak. Finally he found his voice.

"Thank you. You have been an excellent brother."

The man lived with the barber and his wife six years, slept in the little bedroom off their kitchen, ate at their table with them, walked with them to the park, and referred to them as his folks. At the end of those six years he remained as much a mystery as the day he came, but he had inspired affection and even gratitude in the hearts of the barber and his wife, who by all reckoning should have disliked him mightily. One day he disappeared.

My brother has gone back to the stage," explained the barber. He said it sadly. He was really lonesome. He tried to keep up the habit of reading evenings, but he could not be interested. He endeavored to imitate the swell look as if had for this no purpose, but he could not succeed. Trade languished, and he found fault with him in the manner which rendered the quarrels and the bay rum.

A CAPE TOWN JAIL.

Special Punishment Inflicted Upon Many of the Cosmopolitan Population.

Cape Town, Africa, has among other curiosities a prison containing about 1,000 prisoners, where almost every nation of the earth is represented. There are American miners and sons of the English aristocracy, French, Italians, Russians and Hebrews. A great many of the prisoners are serving political sentences. Most of these prisoners are employed in building forts and fortifications. The hillside overlooking the city of Cape Town is a veritable Gibraltar. Tier upon tier of modern guns have been placed here by the government and the work has hardly all been done by the convicts. The convicts who are not employed on public works are hired out to farmers. Farmers of South Africa much prefer convict labor to that of the natives because they have to pay the latter 2 shillings a day. The convicts are paid for at the rate of 6 pence a day. The government furnishes guards to prevent criminals from escaping from their employers. All prisoners are divided into three classes according to the length of their sentences. Those sentenced for life are distinguished by a black band around their hats. When they first enter the prison they are placed in a cell and remain a period of three months. If they behave themselves during this probation they are allowed to work with other prisoners. They remain for eight months. If they continue to behave well they are transferred to the second class, wear a white band around their hats and are allowed to work with a companion. In the first class they remain for ten months. They are allowed to converse with their companions. They are also permitted to receive letters and write letters. If they behave well during the period they are transferred to the third class, wear a red band around their hats and are allowed to work in gangs. They remain in this class for eight months. If they continue to behave well they are transferred to the second class, wear white bands around their hats and are allowed to work with a companion. In the first class they remain for ten months. They are allowed to converse with their companions. They are also permitted to receive letters and write letters. If they behave themselves during this probation they are allowed to work with other prisoners. They remain