Then Bertha, to her husband's amazement and dismay, fell down at her father's feet and confessed that she she had yielded to temptation and stolen the missing bill. She hurriedly stated the miraculous chance that had put Edmund in a position to save her, and inferring from her father's knowledge of the affair, that the man who had detected the shortage had confided to him his daughter's responsibility with a view of screening her, besought him to accept the friendly overture.

"I would permit no man's dishonor for the sake of my own," he declared. "For what you have done, you must pay the penalty. Your impossible combination has actually come to pass. As the counter check came for your husband in his payment, so it has come to me in the present case. It was I, of course, who caught the short pack which you had slipped for me."

Bertha clasped her hands in prayer. "I am so glad," she said, "that you have found the bill. I am so glad that you have found the bill. I am so glad that you have found the bill."

"I am so glad," she said, "that you have found the bill. I am so glad that you have found the bill. I am so glad that you have found the bill."

The following paper was read by Dr. Carroll before the last meeting of the Illinois Swine Breeders' Association.

The subject assigned me is one that ought to be drawn out to cover a vast field, but my time is too limited to permit of dealing with the subject in detail.

Selfishness as one of the worst vices on the hog business. How many of our selfish men succeed in the business? I claim that a selfish breeder will never make the business a success.

The successful breeder must be liberal enough to see the faults and imperfections of his own herd and when he finds a cross in the herd of a neighbor breeder that would be an improvement on his own, he should not be so vain as to refuse to permit his own herd to go to work rather than buy from a brother breeder.

When I see a man who is so vain as to refuse to permit his own herd to go to work rather than buy from a brother breeder, I think of the man who says, 'I will not sell my own stock to any one else.'
