THATSPANISHWOMAN

I first heard of it just after our marriage. He came home. It was he then—raving in set terms of art concerning the picture.

"Why didn't you buy it?" I asked.

"I offered old Doughty $500 and he rejected."

I gasped as much as old Doughty would. "You was an awful nice fella."

Five years afterward old Doughty died, and my husband went to a sale of his pictures and things, he came back gloomy. He told me that some Doughty was there and he could not get against him. The artist's son was to bid up to $100 and the husband by what amount he pleased. It went for $125.

Lately young Doughty went to bank right entrance of the picture. My husband was on the way again. He asked young Doughty to dinner and he found out how to get the picture. He asked him to paint a picture of his own.

The artist's son had the picture for the next day. He was in the picture. He was in the picture. He was in the picture. He was in the picture. He was in the picture.

WILD CAT STORY

A group in the restaurant of the Waldorf Astoria, the other evening were talking about hunting. Several pretty tall stories had been perpetrated of which I recall a few. One of the most interesting was told by a man who called the following narrative "some American story." Mr. Rogers, who is known to the intimates as "Fairfield Rogers," was on a hunting trip in the State of Michigan. He had a rather peculiar looking animal which he thought was a wild cat. He was in the State of Michigan. He was in the State of Michigan. He was in the State of Michigan.

MACHINERY OF THE FIFTH

The following paper was read by H. D. Carroll at the last meeting of the Illinois Saine Breeders' Association.

The subject assigned me is one that is not to be taken as a vast field, but my time is too limited to permit of dealing with the subject in detail.

Selfishness is one of the worst vices on the hog business. How many really selfish men succeed in the business? I claim that a selfish breeder will never make the business a success.
