BIRMINGHAM, FRIDAY, APRIL 20

His satanic majesty may not run all the newspapers in the country, but no one can deny the fact that no newspaper can be printed without the aid of the "devil."

The chief French railroads have removed all the advertising billboards from along their routes, so that the many strangers who visit France this year will be able to scan the beauties of the lands ape without incessantly being reminded of the virtues of wares they do not need. Americans will note the reform with pleasure, and may be moved to say with Sterne: "The order this matter loiter in France."

President Frost of Berea College, in the mountains of Kentucky, is a Kentucky mountain girl who taught school in a particularly unpromising district. A native observer praised her enthusiastically, saying that to look at her you would think she was having the hardest kind of a time. Possibly some teachers in favored regions miss the highest success because they think it's going to be a hard time when they're having the worst kind of a time.

Value of Diamond. An idea of the great increase in the value of precious diamonds imparted by the labor of polishing and mounting is well illustrated by the following table, which shows the value of a diamond of the first water of the weight specified before and after it has undergone the process mentioned:

	Rough.	Polished.
1 carat	$ 8	$ 20
2 carats	32	80
3 carats	72	180
4 carats	128	320
5 carats	200	500
6 carats	288	720
7 carats	392	980
8 carats	512	1,280
9 carats	648	1,620
10 carats	800	2,000

[illegible] Stone. Much of the [illegible] genuine Moslem and Hajji. The average Pierre Roux can distinguish what [illegible] depravity [illegible] sometimes the possession of [illegible] [illegible] he receives a sufficiency of the berry to supply the needs of his family. He bakes the berries till black, and pounds them into powder in a mortar. The beverage resulting therefrom has the color of ink and the consistency of broth. Since then, the use of the berry of the natives have learned to prepare coffee for drinking purposes after the American fashion, but most of them practice the ways of their fathers.

In the field of recent discoveries, one of the greatest wonders is the heavens appear in some degree wonderful. There are small class of variable stars [illegible] than twenty in known number the most conspicuous member of which is Algol, the Demon of the Arabs, which at brief intervals offers a partial eclipse from the interposition of dark or invisible companion revolving around him. Mr. Ritchey, of Pomona College, and Mr. Ranyard, of England, have lately shown that all stars are probably variable in their composition, hardly more than shifting clouds, in only one of the limit no density exceed half that of water, and in size is less than one-tenth that of water. The advantage of the [illegible] of water. This [illegible] star [illegible] may fall far [illegible] of the density of sun, compared with water, is [illegible] The [illegible] by Algol that the Algol stars may each have a dependent [illegible] an enormous cloud-envelope.

The bonding line between [illegible] bribery has been [illegible] the president of the United States, who has nearly two hundred curios and has forbidden, need to say that such gifts necessitated the offer of Neither the ministry to England nor the postoffice at Podunk. Not all gifts, however, are of suspicious complexion. For example, the check of one hundred thousand dollars recently sent to the [illegible] by a street railway company by certain prominent members of the corporation was a notable token of their trust in his integrity and of their appreciation of his devotion to the interests of the corporation and the public. The gift is probably the largest ever made by a corporation to a single salaried officer. That the recipient had many years as a [illegible] craftsman, and many years as a [illegible] that [illegible] his permanent advancement to no influence but his own industry, ability and faithfulness, is sufficient protest against the too common assertion that boys of today have no chance.

The reciprocity treaties recently negotiated by the executive have not found favor with the senate. In the case of the arrangement with the Argentine Republic the time limit fixed within which the treaty must be ratified passed without action by the senate. Those with England relating to the West Indies would have lapsed in the same way had not the British government agreed to an extension of the time. The time limit in the French treaty was March 24, but it was extended with the consent of the French government.

Evidences of the preparation for the grand national contest for control of the government during the next four years are now to be found everywhere. Caucuses and conventions for the election of delegates to local, state and national conventions draw the attention of every man of whatever party to the culminating political duty which he is to perform in November. Discussion of "issues" grows warmer, and consideration of statesmanship of prospective candidates becomes eager and pointed.

Text: John xx. 11. "In the garden a new sepulcher."

Looking around the churches this morning, seeing flowers in wreaths and flowers in stars and flowers in crosses and flowers in crowns, billows of beauty, conflagration of beauty, I feel as if you stood in a small heaven. You say those flowers will fade. Yes, but perhaps you may see them again. They may be immortal. The fragrance of the flower may be the spirit of the flower, the body of the flower dying on earth to-day, but to-morrow to live in the world. I do not say it will be so. I only say it may be so. The ancestors of those tuberoses and camellias and japonicas and jasmines and heliotropes were born in paradise. Those apostles of beauty came down in the regular line of apostolic succession. Their ancestors during the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
