LOST ON THE... VELDT

A STORY OF THE BOER CAMPAIGN IN NATAL

By H. B. Mackenzie

CHAPTER VI.—(Continued.)

At last they stopped. Sam, who had come up to Blanche, went to her immediately, and, without saying a word, lifted her from her horse and carried her into the house. Then he returned and helped Moore to dismount. He was drawn from his horse and then carried in. He had been shot through the body, and was in a fainting condition.