Valuable Hints for Those Intending to Visit the Paris Exposition.

If going abroad it is always the best to take a passport, says Leslie's Weekly. Although one is not necessary in France, it is often useful in case of admittance to public buildings or should one's identity be required. The most thing to do upon arriving in Paris is to register at the American consulate, as it is well to know what the hours are from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m. The hours of the American consulate are from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. All vital papers, such as foreign currency, must be taken to Paris at once, as it is impossible to get them there. It is also well to have a small amount of money in the form of gold or silver coins, as these are the most readily accepted in France.
