The powers that be: Love, money, ambition and a good mother.

The broad-eating world requires more than 2,000,000,000 bushels of wheat every 12 months.

The sultan of Turkey will this summer celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his accession to the throne.

Introduction of the tropics in the French Riviera has led to much injury to the hotel business and a loss of the accustomed patronage.

If these signs make for the axiom "The farther away from home the dearer the money," travelers should be warned accordingly.

The statue of Father Louis Hennepin, the famous explorer, by Mr. McKenzie, the sculptor, is now on exhibition in Minneapolis.

The Paris exposition is not the only one that is going to put up an enormous deficit. It is doubtful if this has been at all and Paris today is as intensely cheaper place to dine with than London is. But a great surprise has come over the heart of all the restaurants which is swelling, probably, to the multitude of strangers who are in Paris and who expect certain dishes at a French restaurant and in order those only.

As between the vanity of soldiers and the vanity of women, the latter is the more expensive. Experiments made by Prof. Atwater, of Conn. N. H., show that the cost of food on plain fare of soldiers in the field, and the cost of food on the rich fare of the officers in the field, and the cost of food on the rich fare of the officers in the field, and the cost of food on the rich fare of the offic
