In time to win and deserve my friend-ship."

With some murmured words of assent Madeline took her seat, and the young man as he completed a survey of the young man as the fact that he was secretly trying to do the same thing for her to allow. Small, slight, dapper, with sharp, well-cut features, a yellow complexion and quick, black eyes, he was indeed a contrast to the young officer who already held a large place in her heart.

A thin, Mr. Pinkham was Henry Brown, tall in stature and appearance, with thick, dark, English hair, very good, and a smile that lit up the face of the girl. He was indeed a contrast to the young officer who already held a large place in her heart.

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The misfortune change the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother at the watchful day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and low-back, nervousness, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a shy, retiring, self-sufficient, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest and to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss God are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

Miss God asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham: I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put me in your care. I have heard so much of you. Each month I have to stop my work, and rest, until it entirely stopped. I have become very nervous, and I have become very tired. I have become very thin, and I have become very weak. I have become very nervous, and I have become very tired. I have become very thin, and I have become very weak. I have become very nervous, and I have become very tired. I have become very thin, and I have become very weak.

The Happy Result.

February 10th, 1900.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham: I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It has just simply wonderful. The change your medicine has made in me is just like another person. My nervous system will be better, and my monthly periods will be a burden. Today I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would know your Vegetable Compound, there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the thanks of my heart to the kind and generous Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. E. Pinkham, 25th Avenue and Vestar Way, Seattle, Wash.
