

MY HALF SISTER

By ELTON HARRIS

CHAPTER IV

It was a very long time before I could get the girl to go to bed. She was sitting on the edge of the bed, looking at me with a sad expression on her face. I had been telling her about the things that had happened to me, and she had been listening to me with a sad expression on her face. I had been telling her about the things that had happened to me, and she had been listening to me with a sad expression on her face. I had been telling her about the things that had happened to me, and she had been listening to me with a sad expression on her face.

When she had finally gone to bed, I went to my room and lay down. I thought about the things that had happened to me, and I thought about the things that had happened to me. I thought about the things that had happened to me, and I thought about the things that had happened to me. I thought about the things that had happened to me, and I thought about the things that had happened to me.

In the morning, I went to the kitchen and found that the girl had been up all night. She was sitting at the table, looking at me with a sad expression on her face. ULTIMA VERITAS.

In the bitter waves of Heaven and tossed about
By the cruel winds that blow
From the dreary shores of doubt—
When the anchors that fettered his
Are floating in the gulf
I will surely find my fate
I know that right is right
That it is not good to lie
I will be better than my
And I will be a man
I will be a man
I will be a man
