Since Willie Goes to School.

Since Willie goes to school the days
Are always full of peace,
And in a hundred little ways
The cares of life decrease.
The hall are littered up no more
With blocks and tops and traps,
No marbles in the floor,
But are we happier than before?
Ah, well, perhaps, perhaps.

Since Willie went to school the air
Has lost its former thrill,
There are no cries to rend the air
Make all the neighbors ill,
His pranks have left a space that's void,
No longer is he missed,
But I, the mother, am annoyed
Deeply, I must insist.
