REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

You can't always judge of a dress by the woman in it.

A woman's shriek of agony sounds most like the squeal of a horse when he is mad.

If you don't want to know what a man's wife is like, study his taste in other women.

Some of the ancients knew a lot. The ancient Hindu women had to pray to their husbands.

As soon as a woman gets too fat to look well she begins to wear a bunch of christenings.

As soon as you catch up with a woman she turns around and pretends she was going the other way.

Every man looks like a fool when he is proposing and every other woman but the one would think so.

Every woman has a longing to know how much her husband would take when she doctor told him she was going to die.

The average man doesn't get married because he loves little children. What he gets married for is because he thinks he is going to get fed better.

The average old bachelor hates women to hold a baby while his mother fashions her glove than he would to kiss on a red hot stove with a bunch of skyrocket.

When one woman calls on another woman for the first ten minutes neither of them says anything that the other can remember, because each one is studying the other's dress.

When a poor young man marries a rich girl all the women say he is marrying a poor girl, but when a rich young man marries a poor girl, they say she is the most beautiful thing in the world.

Some time after a few more thousands of years a great scientist will get both who will discover why it is that women kiss each other. New York Press.
