

THANKS GIVING FAIRY

The night before Thanksgiving I found myself sitting alone in the window in the dark and when I put my head against the pane it was wet and I could not see.

"Oh, pretty mamma, what is the matter with you?"

"I am so tired and so sad, my little girl," she answered, "that I can't see anything but you."

"What is the matter with you, mamma?"

"Oh, my dear child, I am so tired and so sad, my little girl, that I can't see anything but you."

"What is the matter with you, mamma?"

A RELIGIOUS FESTIVAL

There is no doubt that the religious festival of the year is the one which is held in the city of New York. It is a festival which is held in the city of New York. It is a festival which is held in the city of New York.

Next day I went to the office and found that I had a letter from my mother. It was a letter from my mother. It was a letter from my mother.

"I will go to the office and see what I can do for you," she said. "I will go to the office and see what I can do for you."

"I will go to the office and see what I can do for you," she said. "I will go to the office and see what I can do for you."

"I will go to the office and see what I can do for you," she said. "I will go to the office and see what I can do for you."

"I will go to the office and see what I can do for you," she said. "I will go to the office and see what I can do for you."

From the Farmers' Review

The American home market for dairy products is the one that should engage the attention of American cowkeepers. We have the best market in the world and it is our duty to make it still more increasing its demand. Many of our states and territories do not make enough butter to supply the home demand and it is our duty to make it still more increasing its demand.

How is This?

Why is it that the dairy industry is so successful in some states and so unsuccessful in others? The answer is simple. It is the result of the habits of the people in each state. In those states where the people are used to eating dairy products, the dairy industry is successful. In those states where the people are not used to eating dairy products, the dairy industry is unsuccessful.

An Australian Dairyman's View

The Hon. J. H. Keating, South Australian Minister for Agriculture, has written an interesting article on the dairy industry in Australia. He says that the dairy industry in Australia is one of the most successful in the world. This is due to the fact that the people in Australia are used to eating dairy products.

Enclosure Egg Waste

Reports from Western shipping stations indicate a degree of waste in current egg collections that is almost unprecedented. At one station, a collector reports three days' collections amounting to 2,475 dozen, of which 1,504 dozen were bad. In another station, 2,822 dozen were collected, of which 1,022 dozen, or about 36 per cent, were bad. Another collector in the same state reports that the stock coming out of his flock for the last three days up to total loss and says: "Of about 1,300 cases received this week, I find that we get out some 250 cases. There has necessarily been a loss of some 1,050 cases at this rate. It is a pity that we have to lose so much of our stock. It is a pity that we have to lose so much of our stock."

Disappointing an Epitaph

Stylish—What is your favorite fish? "Jellyfish." "Well, I don't know that I love any, but I think I'd like a gold plate about as well as anything."—Sumerville Journal.

The Age of a Fish

How to tell the age of a fish is one of the problems that are often confronted by the sportsman as the naturalist. Size is no true criterion, as a fish which has been well fed may be twice the size of one of the same species that has been poorly fed and yet not half so old. The rings on the scales are not quite so inflexible of size, and in many species the scales are so small that their rings cannot be seen. According to the latest findings of a German authority, the rings on the scales of a fish are formed each year, and a new ring is formed each year, as in the case with trees.
