

WRECKS AND AWFUL SCENES

Two Wabash Trains Collide Near Seneca.

MANY KILLED AND CREMATED.

It is stated that about 100 persons, mostly Italians, were burned to death in the Wrecks After the Collision, Engineers Strongly Blamed for the Accident.

The wreck of the Wabash train on the first of Sunday at Seneca, W. Va., was the most serious of the accidents of the week. It was the result of a collision between two trains, one of which was carrying a large number of passengers. The accident resulted in the deaths of many people and the destruction of property.

When the first shock of the collision came, the passengers were thrown about as if they were stones. Many were killed and many more were injured. The scene was a terrible one, with bodies scattered about and flames rising from the wreckage.

The cause of the accident is being investigated by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It is believed that the engineers of both trains were at fault. The train from Seneca was moving westward and the train from Parkersburg was moving eastward.

The bodies of the dead were recovered and buried. The injured were taken to the hospital. The property that was destroyed was insured. The railroad company is being held responsible for the accident.

The railroad company is being held responsible for the accident. It is being accused of negligence in the way it operated the trains. The company is being sued for the damages caused by the accident.
