New England Women

Have an Abiding Faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

After years of struggle to attain and merit public confidence, with a firm and steadfast belief that some day others would recognize in us the truth, good faith, and honesty of purpose which we know we possess, what a genuine satisfaction it is to us to read, and to realize the uplifting influence of the merited confidence of a vast army of our fellow beings.

This stands for Pinkham's name in New England and all over America, and nowhere is the faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound greater than in New England women. Men and must of course can gain this.

ORGANIC INFLAMMATION.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: — I was troubled very badly with inflammation of the bladder, was sick in bed with it. I had two doctors, but they did me no good. A friend gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me. I have now taken three bottles of it, and I am entirely cured. It is a God-send for any woman, and I would recommend it to any one so circumstanced as I. I think, if most of the women would take more of your medicine instead of going to the doctors, they would be better off. The compound has also cured my husband of kidney trouble." — Miss Mabel Gookin, Box 166, Mechanic Falls, Maine.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

"For two years I suffered from nervous prostration, the result of female weakness. I had leucorrhœa very badly, and at time of menstruation would be obliged to go to bed. Also suffered with headaches, pain across back, and in lower part of abdomen. I was so discouraged. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, and concluded to give it a trial. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham, and received a very nice letter in return. I began at once the use of her Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now feeling splendid. I have no more pain at monthly periods, can do my own work, and have gained ten pounds. I would not be without your Vegetable Compound. It is a splendid medicine. I am very thankful for what it has done for me." — Mrs. J. W. Jr., 76 Carolina Ave., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure these women — why not you — you cannot tell until you try it, and really want to get well, commence its use at once, and do not let a dealer palm off upon you that he has something of his own which is better, for that is all untrue. Ask him to produce the evidence we do.

"I cannot help but feel that it is my duty to do so, in regard to recommending your wonderful medicine. I must say it is the grandest medicine on earth, and have advised a great many suffering with female troubles to take it. I tell pie I wish I could go on the platform and lecture on it. My trouble was painful menstruation. The suffering I endured can not describe. I was treated by one of our most prominent physicians here for leucorrhœa, and got no better, getting worse instead of better. At the end of the fifth month he told me he had done all he could for me, and that I had better go to the hospital.

My sister advised me to try your Vegetable Compound, as it cured her of backache. I did so, and I took it faithfully, and am now cured of my trouble, and in perfect health, many thanks to your medicine. I cannot praise it enough, and would recommend it to all who suffer from any female weakness." — Mrs. H. S. Ball, 461 Orchard St., New Haven, Conn.

THE WEST.

I listen to the rumble and rattle of the rail
And to my ears unfolded the world's most wondrous tale.
The prairie tamed and broken; the forest split in two;
The lake and ocean blended; the mountain shivered through.
The chasm knit with iron; the cataract swung back.
Both Time and Distance shrunken with every foot of track.

The tramp of millions westward is echoed from the wheel.
The strain of millions striving sensations new to feel.
New cities planted at twilight, perfected with the dawn.
Our Nation's might replenished by western brain and brawn.

The fruits are ayes most luscious, the flowers fairest blooms.
The men are best and bravest, and there is least of gloom.
Where sets the Star of Empire, where Sun of Progress dips
And burnishes the wheat fields and sides the grassy ships.

A Legal Affair.

(Copyright, 1899, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The little town slumbered in noonday quiet. Only an occasional dog would lazily get up, walk around a few times, and then lie down again. Even the flies seemed to be affected by the heat, for they moved about very slowly, and in fact it was the only sign of animation for two blocks, for a rival sign across the street that screeched and swayed just as violently and to as little purpose. The sign in question informed the public that Mr. Would have had there been a public, that John D. Marberry was an attorney and real estate agent, and that he had a choice lot of suburban business farm and ranch property for sale or rent on easy to me. The truth is, the town if Archer was for sale or rent on easy terms, and the few natives who had not already left for greener country, small in fact to necessity more than choice.

John D. Marberry, who had come West to grow up with the country, was also a victim of which I write. He sitting in a small, hot, dusty office beneath the screaming sign, gazing attractedly up the deserted street out to the indescribable sketch of painted prairie. When he located in Archer, it was on a boom. Immigration was pouring into the county, the Hetta and Taw R. R. had been surveyed to the town, and everything indicated an era of development and prosperity. But the boom came and went, the railroad was routed another way, the land was not taken up by the public, the road was not built, and short crops and two years of drouth had caused to use an expression usually applied to such conditions the whole bottom to drop out of Archer. Marberry thought a were not as abstract as his appearance in fact, they had a very practical trend. He was thinking seriously of selling out soon, stock and barrel, if such an opportunity should be offered for the law and real estate business, and moving back East. He had made a bad venture, he had been disappointed, he was heartily tired of the dry monotony of things. The West held but one attraction for him, and had for and attraction this story would not have been written. He had met Miss Ola Mann, and that meant that he had fallen under the spell of her charming personality. Ola was the daughter of a rich old rancher, who numbered his acres and cattle by the thousands. In the active out-door life she had led she had developed into a superb specimen of the western woman, and she was considered very wealthy. Therein lay the perplexity of the case. Marberry felt himself a man of parts, that he had a future, but, for the present, he was stranded. He had been thoroughly over by the girl as he tossed restlessly nights, and as he sat dejected in the stuffy office or else watching the dust drift down the deserted street. For presumptuously hoping for a reciprocation of his love and for the consuming uncertainty. To move East, establish himself, and write that was the question. Once, as he returned from a Fourth of July celebration, where he, as the orator of the occasion, had covered himself with glory, he had been on the point of an avowal of his love, but Miss Ola had seemed to parry his words, and being proud, sensitive, he had remained silent.

But, now, his mind was made up. He jerked his chair to the desk and began to prepare an inventory of his office fixtures, books, etc., the work completed, he walked across the street to the rival sign. Taylor, the owner, had invested pretty heavily in real estate, and would likely remain, as Mann has made an assignment, there was no prospect of his disposing of it for awhile. He would sell his plunder to him if not, why, he would take it with him.

Taylor was looking over the last issue of the Archer Star, a copy he had taken from the press, striving against the rules of the office only ten minutes before.

"Well, I guess the worst has happened," he began, looking up from the paper and confronting Marberry in a chair.

"What is it?" asked Marberry.

"Mann has made an assignment."

"Can't be true."

"That's what the paper says."

Marberry took the paper, investigated slowly and pondered deeply.

He walked over to the Star office and talked to Tooly. On his departure he took a paper from the mailing desk, then went to the post office and got another out of the box. Pat Bonner was reading the Star to a crowd of six. The assignment was the local of interest. Another item Marberry had overlooked was also receiving its share of comment. Miss Ola Mann had secured a position in the Archer school. Prof. Bennet testified to the truth of the last bit of news.

John D. Marberry walked across the street with a new buoyancy in his step, tearing the inventory into bits and casting it on the hot wind. He entered his office and took down the duster that had been taking a protracted rest. Every book and piece of furniture was gone over carefully and re-arranged. When he sat down to his desk again there was a tidy and prosperous appearance about the room that it had not worn since the days of the railroad boom. John D. Marberry had finally determined that the fate of Archer should be his fate sink or swim, survive or perish he would remain in Archer.

He went industriously to work on an abstract of the county an undertaking he had given up some weeks before from sheer discouragement.

He was still writing when a buggy rolled up to the door. He looked up surprised at the interruption. Miss Ola greeted him cordially. He has been out to see her from the beginning. If not father's financial embarrassment, we shall hear of her in connection with Marberry's name. Before long it. She was the same fresh, self-sober, charming Miss Ola.

"I have just read the Star," Miss Ola began Marberry, when they were both seated. "Would pardon me for referring to it, but I know you—"

"Excuse me!" broke in Miss Ola, "but excuse do not mention it. There is nothing to be sorry for, we still have the home place and you know I have only to say the word to the school. After all, what is a little more or less property? Here are some papers father told me to hand to you. He wishes you to look over them." She rose to go. Marberry rose also.

"I have something to say to you, Miss Ola," he began, stepping nearer, "something I would have said before this had it not been for certain circumstances and which, but for certain other circumstances, I would not say now."

Miss Ola resumed her seat.

"I desire you to know, Miss Ola," he continued hesitatingly, "that I love you."

Miss Ola's eyes were on the floor, roses came and went on her cheeks. Then, she looked up sweetly and said:

"I'm sure, Mr. Marberry, I'm not displeased."

Not a single client dropped in to interrupt the conversation that followed. But then, if there had been clients in Archer it would not have happened just as it did.

The rival sign across the street was still screaking and flapping fruitlessly when Marberry and his visitor stepped into the street and rolled off.

Taylor stood there critically over the paper he had just finished. There was something telltale about his rival that caused his thoughts to go wandering back to a sunny day now buried, with many other bright things, in the past when he had entered the land were Love is king.

There'll soon be another local in the Star," he mused, and his thoughts drifted back to silent streets, scorched prairie, and ruined investments.

A few months later there was a quiet wedding out at Mann's Ranch. Tooly, of the Star, was best man. Taylor congratulated his rival heartily. Marberry well, Marberry was happy.

And Archer has no longer a deserted village, but a thriving western metropolis. The screaking sign that flapped above Marberry's office has long since ceased to screak. Marberry occupies elegant rooms above Mann and Marberry's Bank. Those who write him use the prefix Hon.

Weighing Food for Cattle.

The accepted manner of feeding is by weight, although all grain food for cattle is sold by weight. A given quantity of grain is probably something a bulk of flour being the same, and because of the great difference in the feeding value of the different ground feeds, all feeding is done by weight rather than by bulk. The average farmer will tell you he can get better results from coarse floury middlings and corn meal than from wheat bran and chicken meal, which is so generally used, but does not. Certainly not if he attempts to do the feeding value of a given measure and no more. It pays in profits. Eight quarts of middlings and four quarts of corn meal weigh 18 pounds, and furnish 1.5 pounds of digestible protein. Eight quarts of bran weigh 10 pounds, and four quarts of kitchen meal weigh 10 pounds, and furnish 1.5 pounds of protein, with a difference in cost in favor of the latter of nearly a cent.

Time Wasted.

The clerk was interrupted in the progress of the day's work by the rumbling of letter and envelope through the waste basket.

"What's the matter?" asked the boss.

"Nothing," answered the clerk, "only I've been practicing with both hands, and in the future I intend to do the purchasing of his rubber stamp, and in the first letter I assert my authority by having it."

And he started the secretary and the boss to laughing.

Why this fondness for a rubber stamp? It is located in the right hand corner of his parlor.

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna Is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy—I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy." Very respectfully, Dan A. Grosvenor.

Hon. John Williams, County Clerk, Duluth, Minn., says the following in a letter: "As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from that disease."

Miss Mattie L. Guild, President Illinois Young People's Christian Temperance Union, in a recent letter from Chicago, Ill., says:

"I doubt if Peruna has a rival in all the remedies recommended to-day for catarrh of the system. A remedy that will cure catarrh of the stomach will cure the same condition of the mucous membrane anywhere. I have found it the best remedy I have ever tried for catarrh, and believing it worthy my endorsement I gladly accord it."

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, orator of Reservoir Council No. 168, Northwestern Legion of Honor, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes from 2538 Polk St., N. E.:

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy."

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna certainly stands alone. Catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.
