HORSELS OF HUMOR

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM. There are two handsome old ladies sitting at the window with their work in their laps, one the hostess and the other the visitor. They were children together and still talked their former playmates as "the girls."

"Where's Margaret?" asked the visitor.

"Out in the back yard with some of the friends skipping the rope. My favorite granddaughter, you know."

"Rather delicate, I'm afraid. I declare I don't know what the rope is growing up. They don't seem to be doing anything. Do you remember how we used to skip the rope, Sue?"

"Just as though it was yesterday. 'Skip' was the designation when we just jumped an ordinary rate of speed. 'Trot' was faster, and 'canter' was the fastest."

"That's right. To do anything faster than 'canter' involved lots of preparation on the part of the girls. I don't suppose that there is one of those children who still could skip 'canter' without making a mistake."

"Let's take a look at them."

"When they reached the back door the girls were sitting on the lawn. They were dressed in their best, and they were looking at each other with a look of surprise."

"What's the matter with them?" asked the visitor.

"I don't know. They look as though they were waiting for something to happen."

"I don't know. They look as though they were waiting for something to happen."

double poultry yard till it is a foot high, which size it will reach in a few weeks, if thinned out so that the stalks stand from one to two feet apart. This thinning is absolutely necessary if the best results are to be obtained. A heavy loil, stalk and midrib of the leaf are desirable. The fowls will then strip the portions of leaves on either side of the stalk and will leave the midrib a bare stalk. But when that is accomplished turn the fowls into another yard of rape and let the first lot recover from its attack. The good growing weather the midrib will quickly send out new areas of leaves, and second state of the fowls will be as good as the first. If the rape is planted thickly it will remain small, and the fowls will feed it down to the ground. The soil will destroy its root and that will be the last of it.
