A GIRL'S WAY

I ask her if she loves me,
She shakes her head, and when I try to leave she smiles,
And I know she loves me,
But she won't let me say so.

"What you love another?"
In my eyes I say,
She smiles, but as I turn to leave,
She sweetly looks me in the eye,
And says: "I love you."

With uncontrived hands I offer,
My love, my all to her,
And seek to clasp her, but she cries,
"Stand back, my love, you are not yet my own."

With uncontrived heart I speak,
I love you, sweet, you are my own,
I love you, sweet, you are my own,
I love you, sweet, you are my own,
I love you, sweet, you are my own.
