ONLY TO HEAR HER VOICE AGAIN

She smiled brightly.

"So you have roamed enough. Well, it is a good thing to come home after being long away."

"And you—where have you been and how long since your return?" What of the coach and the splendid gowns?"

"They were my godmother's loan for a short time."

He looked at her perplexed.

"A short time? How long were you away?"

"Foolish one! Not at all. Why should I go? I have spun and brewed and baked. I have seen the world from my window and door here. Women are not so varying, Lawrence. I did not care to follow fool's fire—not I, sir."

"And now?"

"Your place is ready. I fancy you will rove no more, at least not soon. Is it not so?"

RECORD OF EARLY BOOKS.

First English Book Was Not Printed in England.

Folly's Fire.

"Then it was a double loss to me," she said pensively as she handed him a letter.

"So the times have gone good with you, Lawrence?"

"And easily," he replied. "I am not in my youth and can enjoy. The towns are full of sport for a man who loves a light heart and good company. But I promised Aurelia. She is, doubtless, well amused somewhere. Aurelia was handsome and can take care of herself."

The old woman scowled at him while he read:

"I am indeed well off, content, but will come if I am called. I enclose

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A TALK FULL OF THE SUMMER SPIRIT.

"Go Forth Unto the Mount and Fetch Olive Branches and Pine Branches and Myrtle Branches and Palm Branches * * * * to Make Booths."—Neh. 8:15.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

Washington, Sept. 1.—This discourse of Dr. Talmage is full of the breath of the hills and fields and is a summer sermon, text, Nehemiah VIII, 15: "Go forth unto the mount and fetch olive branches and pine branches and myrtle branches and palm branches and thick trees to make booths."

[illegible] Mount Olive were in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]