

There is an idea prevalent that the observance of the day was almost wholly confined to the north. Nothing could be more erroneous. The "Euse Linn" of Connecticut, surviving a fervent for hardiness, has increased the popular mind with an idea which was, however, not so accurate. As severe as those enactments were, they were scarcely more rigorous, whenever the observance of Sunday was concerned, than under which the colony of Virginia was established. In the early period, attendance on divine service was strictly enforced, and absences from regular employment, as a rigidly enforced law. It was a charge going through the Legislature, which was to be enforced. Religion engrossed the energies of the people. Participation in worship was the law and whoever failed in it was liable to a lawbreaker and was dealt with accordingly. Later on than this, prior to the Revolution—there came a certain laxity in the observance of the day, but when the hunting-bell was sounded, the fighting party was induced into the field; but, as the cause was temporary, the main change in public opinion, the political appointment by a Metropolitan, so the effect was not permanent.

Under these conditions that Hanover presbytery sprang, under the influence of Patrick Henry's model, the president of the Virginia Convention, who some of the English parsons who have made the time notorious, were under the influence of the presbytery, who were standing forth, and making the sending up them of such imbecile and other changes in their indictment against the government. They withstood innovation. They kept the faith. They build churches which are to-day as memorials of their piety and churchmanship. They were the first of their kind in America. They were the first of their kind in America. They were the first of their kind in America.

Many florists are becoming flower farmers for the purpose of raising large quantities for making perfumes. The Department of agriculture calls attention to the fact that the southern states are found exceptionally favorable for the success of such an industry. California, too, is thought to produce the essential oil, or at least, roses on an extensive scale to give 1,500 pounds of rose petals, from which five ounces of the attar may be distilled, and this quantity is worth on the market from $150 to $200. The rose water which remains amounts to 300 gallons to the acre, which is worth from 75 cents to $1 a gallon. Lavender gives a net profit of $100 to the acre. Pure lard, saturated with the scent of flowers—pomade—is worth $6 to $7.50 a pound. Cologne of the finest quality is made of the petals of the rose. The perfume made of saturated lard in alcohol, is worth all the way up to $17 a pint. Other perfumes are equally profitable.

The supply of fresh meat to the troops in the Philippines is a problem which has required much hard work on the part of the military authorities. A widespread epidemic of rinderpest among the native cattle has practically cut off supplies from that source. The department has placed five tons of Australian frozen beef—ten tons of fresh meat, and a large quantity of tinned beef—on hand to supply the troops. "MESSIAH" ORGAN.

Handed, the great composer, had several chamber organs, which it was his custom to make use of when composing. The great majority of these organs are known to the world. But it is forgotten by some of Handel's most ardent admirers, that the "Messiah" organ, which he used when composing the "Messiah," was taken to Ireland, where that work was first brought out. NOVEL BOAT DESIGNED.

The queer looking craft illustrated below has been designed by James P. Pool of Brooklyn, N. Y., with the intention of improving the facilities for handling the sails and steering the boat. In spite of the single sail projecting from one side of the mast on a long boom, the inventor provides a pair of sails equally balanced on either side of the mast, and a system of adjustment in tacking or sailing with the wind to obtain the maximum speed with minimum strain on the rigging. The course, the masts, and the boom are secured to horizontal booms on the mast, with the free edge of the sails adjusted to the mast and under easy control in the stern of the vessel. Instead of easing off or drawing in the long ropes, the course, the masts, and the boom are secured to horizontal booms on the mast, with the free edge of the sails adjusted to the mast and under easy control in the stern of the vessel.

Events of Importance That Have Marked the Past Twelve Months.

Two events overshadowed all others in the first year of the new century. One was the assassination of William McKinley, president of the United States, and the other the death of Queen Victoria, the longest-reigning monarch in British history. Each of the two great English-speaking nations of the world was thus thrust upon its own resources for its highest representative of authority and to face what at one time might have been a severe trial of arms, but in neither case was there even the semblance of physical or industrial warfare or of any manner of military preparation. Theodore Roosevelt became president of the United States, and the year was marked by his energetic administration. The world was thus thrust upon its own resources for its highest representative of authority and to face what at one time might have been a severe trial of arms, but in neither case was there even the semblance of physical or industrial warfare or of any manner of military preparation.
