Concurrence of the defendants place much reliance upon the case of Hoy vs. Hoy.

By Mr. Garsy Hoy told me he did not wish to deliver the deed to his son until after his death, but he did not know what might happen, as he wanted his wife well cared for and if the son devoted in his treatment of his mother, he might make a change.

OBITUARY.

Viola Peckering was born in the town of Southfield, Oakland county, on the 8th of July, 1864, and died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Emory Higley on the 12th of January, 1902, aged 37 years, six months and four days.

Gone to His Reward.

Allen P. Wright, after a year of suffering, passed quietly away at the Pontiac Asylum Hospital, at 7:30 Wednesday morning, Jan. 8. About a year ago he was threatened with a stroke of paralysis, which, after several months of great suffering, died relieved him.

AT THE THEATERS.

At the Lyceum theater next Sunday the new musical comedy, "The Night of the Fourth," will be seen here for the first time. Ordinarily it matters little in the writing of a musical farce whether it has anything substantial as a plot, so long as an opportunity is afforded for exploiting some particular star.

WHITNEY.

"The Village Parson" aims high and true in its work. It certainly contains all the elements of success. The piece is quite a well told story wherein human emotions and sympathies are strongly portrayed, but the play has a high moral tone that should commend it to the most sensitive theatergoer.

was in great pain during the night. It will be several days before he is around again and if the sight of the eye is saved at all it will be after long and careful treatment.

It is said that he did not know that he was an explosive, and many other Detroit physicians were surprised to hear of such an accident. There was nothing on the bottle, it is said, to indicate that there was any danger or care should be used in handling it.

Mr. Allen R. Keyes, agent of the Detroit Savings Company of Detroit, received a gold watch for obtaining evidence from which were secured the largest amount of bets known for the Detroit Savings Company.
