CELEBRATING EARLY

It is the delight of a certain Chicago citizen to get intoxicated on every holiday in the year, save Christmas. But he makes up for this holiday by getting drunk one week before.

He is employed to unload dirt wagons by a north side contractor. Last Tuesday he was working out in Lake View. After he had labored for about four hours, it occurred to him that it was the 18th of December, the day on which he celebrates Christmas. So he went to the nearest saloon and purchased a pint of whisky. One hour later he was not able to stand.

In the meantime the dirt wagons were coming to the dump. The driver, on not finding the unloader, drove back with the dirt to the job. There they told the boss that the unloader had disappeared. The boss got into his buggy and drove to the dump.

Behind a bank of dirt he found his men stretched on the ground fast asleep. One foot away was a fire built by a little boy to keep the man warm. The boss' aroused the unloader from his sleep, and asked him what meant by getting intoxicated during working hours.

"Isn't this the 18th of December?" inquired the man.

"Yes," replied the boss. "What of that?"

"Well," said the unloader, "I never thought a drop on Christmas I always celebrate it by getting drunk a week before." — Chicago Tribune.
