

MAKES A CONFESSION

The Mormon church is alarmed over the excitement caused by the murder of Mrs. Annie Pulitzer by William Hooper Young.

It was with the idea of trying to make the body fit more easily into the trunk.

Young also admitted he had taken Mrs. Pulitzer's body to the Hackensack Meadows in the buggy hired from Evans's livery stable and had taken it to the Morris Canal coeder with the weight.

Young's confession is practically as follows: In answer to myself I want to make this confession of the part I played in the killing of Mrs. Pulitzer of which I am accused.

Tell me if you think it pretty; I do not care. The man is Charles Simpson killed by me in great confusion and an every side were the evidences of a horse struggle.

William Hooper Young, murderer, was taken to a grand jury of Brigham Young makes these words doubly significant.

Afterward we went away together - Eiling and I. Thursday we spent in the Hotel de Ville, where we did not care to see what we did after that. But I think Eiling is in Bridgeport now.

The fact that the New York police are unanimous in saying that William Hooper Young's story of a man named Eiling is a falsehood, nevertheless he kept up his investigations on that line.

The police have discovered the place where Young or someone else hid the body. It was in a trunk in a room in a building in the city.

It was learned that Young had shipped a trunk to Chicago. The local police found this and in a few days discovered a trunk in Chicago containing some other articles belonging to Young.

The police of Derby, Conn., two days after captured a man whom they believed to be William Hooper Young. They also arrested a man named Charles Simpson, who was taken after a desperate fight.

He denied his identity but was positively identified by his former employer, Max Levy, his former partner, Dick Anzer, and by Gustav Ernest, a Brooklyn associate.

Confronted by them, he broke down, admitted his identity, and to Levy made a detailed confession, covering all the circumstances of the murder.

RUN UP HUSBAND'S WAGES

Conductor's Wife Makes Tissue Paper Lamp Shade, Will Sell Punch.

Mackenzie conducted on a new train on the "L," consequently he does his sleeping in the daytime.

As everyone knows who has occasion to use the elevated after 12 o'clock, the fares, after passing certain points on the line, are collected by the conductor for the purpose of registration, carry the little bell punches once so familiar on the surface line.

One afternoon last week he was roused from his durnal slumbers by his industrious little wife who brought for her admiration a lamp shade made of colored tissue paper.

She had made it with her own pretty hands, and its scalloped border was decorated with floral designs.

"Yes, dear," said his dear little wife blithely, "while you were asleep, I was so convenient to punch holes that way."

There is but one American, so far as I know, that remembered in Rome by an honorary inscription on the walls of the city.

There are, however, many other monuments of Americans in Rome, a fact which differentiates the city from other cities in Europe.

Americans in Rome

Historians, Sculptors and Authors That Have Lived in the Eternal City.

time, William Henry Rehnhart of Baltimore died. He also was a sculptor, and all his fellow-artists of the city, and all the Italian artists who were capable of judging good work were unanimous in placing him far above any of his contemporaries in the best of them.

In the Piazza Barberini, a short distance from the palace in which he lived, stands the statue of his residence. Here in this book that stands between the Via S.

Blood AtoneMENT Gen 9: 16 Lev 17: 11 Matt 26: 56 Rom 13: 10 Rom 11: 32 1 Cor 5: 5

TEXTS LEFT BY YOUNG. Photographic Facsimile. To the latter's rooms. According to his statement, Young left Eiling and the woman together and went out to get a bottle of whisky.

YOUNG'S BIBLICAL TEXTS. In Young's room was found the cover of a small book containing the book on which he had written six Scripture references. These texts are as follows:

Gen 9: 16 Lev 17: 11 Matt 26: 56 Rom 13: 10 Rom 11: 32 1 Cor 5: 5

Characteristic of Bereford. Lord Charles Bereford was coming out of his hotel in New York the other morning when a stranger saluted him in nautical fashion and said: "By all means, admiral, but I am Jack Boreford, and you are Commodore at Alexandria."

Origin of Pen Name. Literary men are always deriving their noms de plume from strange sources. Robert Barr, when writing through the main street of an American town came to a sign which read "Sharp" over an undertaker's name.

Big Doings in Heav'n. The Inquisitive Person was sure he had caught a hot trail. The Railroad Magazine and the St. Paul Herald both carried the story of the trial for five minutes and the I. P. had heard thereof.

Are Poets Born or Made? Authorities seem to agree that poets are born, not made, and that they are great by nature rather than by training; they rarely transmit their gifts to their posterity.

Heid in Reserve. The thriftiness of a London shopkeeper was demonstrated to a stranger who had a large quantity of goods for sale.

Oil Driving Out Coal. The substitution of crude oil for soft coal as fuel is steadily growing.

The Home of Morse. The said city; between two and three hundred negroes, and about eight or ten thousand pounds upon bond, estimated at the time at about twenty thousand pounds in all.

Tragedy of the Tenements. The blight of the tenement districts of New York is a tragedy that has no parallel in the history of any other city.

Industry and Idleness. A thin man and a fat man started out on the east side the other day to sell lemons, says the New York Times.

Small Fruit Farm. A small fruit farm of 10 acres about 2 miles from the city of Southfield, Mich. It is in good repair and ready for the successful grower of fruit trees and fruit of a happy life.

Beautiful lake property for sale, located on the east side of Detroit Lake, Mich. It is in good repair and ready for the successful grower of fruit trees and fruit of a happy life.
