

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

I Did Not Feel That I Could Walk

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It is with thankfulness I write that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been of the greatest help to me. My work keeps me standing on my feet all day and the hours are long. Some months ago it didn't seem as though I could stand it. I would get so dreadfully tired and my back ached so I wanted to remain with the pain. When I got home at night I was so worn out I had to go right to bed, and I was terribly blue and dejected. I was irregular and the flow was scanty, and was pale and had dyspepsia. I told a girl friend who was taking your medicine how I felt, and she said I ought to take it too. So I got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and commenced to take it. It helped me right off. After the first few doses menstruation started and was fuller than for some time. It seemed to lift a load off me. My back stopped aching and I felt brighter than I had for months. I took three bottles in all. Now I never have an ache or pain, and I go out after work and have a good time. I am regular and strong and am thankful to you for the change."

"I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound whenever I hear of a girl suffering, for I know how hard it is to work when you feel so sick."—Miss Mary Kimes, 553 9th Ave., New York City.

Women should not fail to profit by the experiences of these women; just as surely as they were cured of the troubles enumerated in their letters, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure others who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, irregular and painful menstruation, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration; remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

Miss Amanda T. Peterson, Box 131, Atwater, Minn., says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I hope that you will publish this testimonial so that it may reach others and let them know about your wonderful medicine."

"Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with the worst kind of fainting spells. The blood would rush to my head, was very nervous and always felt tired, had dark circles under my eyes. I have now taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am entirely cured. I had taken doctor's medicine for many years but it did me no good."

"I accept your thanks for this most excellent medicine which is able to restore health to suffering women."

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Those women who refuse to accept anything else are awarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want—a cure. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Refuse all substitutes.

A GENTLEMAN'S CHILD.

By UNA HUDSON.

The bell of the Foundling's Home rang softly, so softly that the old porter, dozing at her post beside the door took no heed; but Sister Mary Angela passing through the hall heard and herself answered the summons.

"Such a tired, poor thing," she said with a pitying glance at the nodding portress, and she stepped softly past the sleeper and opened the door. Instinctively her hand sought the basket that day and night stood just within the entrance; for Sister Mary Angela had been with the Foundling's Home and her aching hands and pitying heart had soothed and welcomed many a tiny outcast.

She lifted the cradle, and, lowering its wrappings, held it so that the rays of the dimly burning lamp shone full on its baby face. It opened big, violet-blue eyes, and stared blinking at the light, and its dimpled hands clutched at a fold of the sister's black gown. To its dress was pinned a paper on which was written a single line:

"Amabel, a gentleman's child."

And the sister read, and sighed softly for the perished words told a story with which she was only too familiar.

"Poor child," she said gently, "poor child," and her thoughts were of the mother rather than of the babe she held in her arms.

But she blamed not one, this good sister, for she knew how hard the story there are many sides and unheeded she would condemn neither man nor woman.

In the gray light of the early morning Policeman O'Donnell followed a girl, a girl who, moving incoherently and wringing her hands, walked rapidly toward the bridge and the darkly flowing river. She paused for a moment where the current ran swift and the policeman laid his hand on her arm.

"None of that, my girl," he said gently, "none of that."

And at the sound of his voice the poor, distraught creature burst into loud sobbing, and turning, clutched desperately at his arm.

"I don't want to," she cried, the love of life rising again within her and fighting against the black despair that possessed her soul.

"But there's nothing else for me to do; in all the wide world there's no place for me!"

The burly policeman patted her shoulder with rough kindness. "Well, see," he said, "well, see. Come with me, my girl, and half leading, half carrying he made his way through the silent streets and stopped before a square, brick building. But the girl drew back protesting.

"Not here," she cried, "anywhere but here; it is the Foundling's Home."

"And what if it is," O'Donnell said, not heeding her protest, "the good sisters will know what to do for you."

And he rang the bell and gave her in charge of Sister Mary Angela, who took the forlorn girl in her arms and soothed and comforted her as she might a child.

"You shall stay with us as long as you will," the sister said. "We need you here. There was a tiny baby left on the steps last night. The Sisters have so many to care for; you shall have charge of it."

"For," the sister said to herself, "she must be taken out of herself. She needs someone to love and the baby needs a mother."

And the girl caught at the Sister's hand and the light of hope came back to her dull eyes.

"You will let me stay," she breathed softly, "and I may love the little baby. Oh, God be thanked!"

Sheltered within the walls of the Foundling's Home and tenderly cared for by the good Sisters the little Amabel grew and blossomed like a flower.

The girl whose life had all but gone out beneath the silent river watched over the child and loved her with such love as often brought upon her the gentle chiding of Sister Mary Angela.

"Set not your heart upon the things of earth, Sister Dorothea," was her oft-spoken reproach.

And she who had come homeless and despairing, but who now wore the black gown of the sisterhood and was known as "Sister Dorothea," would answer always:

"But you gave her to me to love, Sister Mary Angela."

And Sister Mary Angela looking at the peaceful face of Sister Dorothea and remembering that from which she had been saved would sigh softly and say no more.

But over the happiness of Sister Dorothea there was always the shadow of an impending sorrow; for from time to time, now one and now another of the children whom the Sisters tended would be sent away to homes that had been found for them in the outside world. There were days when men and women came, seeking to gain by adoption that which Nature had denied. And at such times Sister Dorothea would turn faint and sick with apprehension and strive to hide the little Amabel, for though she knew that within the Foundling's Home there could be no future for the child.

MACKEY'S RULE IN BUSINESS.

Plan of Great Financier an Excellent One to Follow.

The late John W. Mackey, not without the multiplicity and magnitude of his business affairs, when he had fallen in death and his body had been buried in its mansion, those whose office it was to settle the status of his great business found that he did not owe a dollar to any man beyond the usual monthly current account for items of personal and household supply. He had not a note payable, no unsettled balances in his commercial enterprises, none of those troublesome unliquidated claims that so frequently delay and deplete estates.

John W. Mackey had lived and done business strictly on the pay as you go plan. Because he had adhered to this policy from the commencement of his career he was able to leave behind a clean score, with an enormous balance on the right side. The incident is a strongly suggestive lesson to young men beginning in business careers. It is one easy to learn and sure to win—Atlantic Constitution.

THE SON OF EX- U. S. MINISTER TO ENGLAND

Commends Peruna to All Catarrh Sufferers.

Hon. Louis E. Johnson is the son of the late Honorable Johnson who was United States Senator from New Jersey, also a General under President Johnson, and later that ever lived.

In a recent letter from 1006 F. Street, N. W., Mr. Johnson says:

"No one should suffer from catarrh when Peruna is accessible. To my knowledge it has caused relief to so many of my friends and acquaintances, that it is humanity to commend its use to all persons suffering with this distressing disorder of the human system."

Catarrh Polons.

Catarrh is capable of changing all the life-giving secretions of the body into watery fluids, which destroy and inflame every part they come in contact with. Appearances to the places affected by catarrh can do little good save to soothe or quiet disordered systems. Hence it is that only such sprays, astringents and inhalants as the human body long will the membranes continue to be inflamed, no matter what treatment is used.

There is, but one remedy that has the desirable effect, and that remedy is Peruna.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive, and which makes them, the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be as pleasant as possible, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not let their medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please remember, the full name of the Company—

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.
