

BIRMINGHAM, FRIDAY, DEC. 5.

Carrie Nation going on the stage? Say, she doesn't look it.

Kyberpate prices will doubtless be a feature of New York's new twenty-story hotel.

Kentucky has a new feud, which was started at a funeral. It is likely to end at several of them.

Great Britain is overjoyed to discover that the hostile mullah is not addicted to the kippie habit.

Numerous experiments show that tea can be grown at Manila. This ought to settle it with Boston.

A specialist advertises "rod noses destroyed by electric needles." If you don't like your nose have it changed.

The Sultan of Turkey is said to be an accomplished pianist. Wonder if he is responsible for the Turkish patrol?

St. Louis will sell its Exposition gold dollars at $3 apiece, which puts them in the same class with porter-house steaks.

John L. Sullivan is reforming again. It is now claimed in his behalf that he doesn't begin taking naps until after sundown.

A misunderstanding about religion has upset a wedding in Chicago. N. Y. letter so not to have it turn a home topey tarry.

A man carrying six bottles of beer fell down the courthouse steps in St. Joseph and never supplied a drop. The guess why is easy.

Two members of the Austrian Reichsrath have come to blows, but the government will not charge admittance to the officials.

The man who is expected from the Chicago board of directors "under mercenary conduct" must have allowed an unbecoming lack of escape.

The Kerosene habit, is the latest. Kerosene may taste better when you drink it voluntarily than when you absorb a little of it by accident.

If the opera libretto left by Zola is anything like the dead novelist's books it ought to be a "success" wherever it is produced at the theater.

Statistics show that every third man is afflicted with appendicitis. It is presumed that the other two have heretofore parted with their vermiform appendices.

A New Yorker who had been postmaster for seventy-four years, died Monday at 82. He was John B. Van Osta. He was not the only patriot who has an unshakeable grip.

King Edward has deprived William Waldorf Astor of his title of "honorable." The best thing that John Bull could do would be to resurrect his title of American citizen.

They are building forts around London for the protection of that city. Can it be possible that John Bull thinks a hostile force might by any means land on his shores?

The Count de Castellane has been told to go back and sit down, but he will not care, for he has been accustomed to receiving hints that he belongs to the superfluous class.

It is not so strange, after all, that Prince Cipriani has won in the election for congressional delegate in Italy. The mischievous chap he is named after is noted for his winning ways.

There is trouble at Fort Sheridan over hash. Accidentally a soldier saw the cook making this mysterious article of diet. Some things must still be done on faith, and hash is one of them.

The discovery of a female repeater at the polls in Detroit yesterday was to the perils of woman's suffrage. It gives a woman a reason for changing her costume half a dozen times on election day.

When a Gotham gentleman tries to raise money on $2,000 worth of old masters, it is called "negotiating a loan," but if he gets $2 on a watch the fact is described as "pawning." What's the difference?

A St. Louis millionaire has been sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for bribing a juror. The juror announced whether he will write a paper during his stay or merely permit himself to be forgotten.

Weyer claims he could have kept the Americas out of Cuba if he had been recalled. This claim is easily made. Kruger might claim that he could have defeated the British in South Africa if he had been there.

A New England scientist was knocked senseless by the bursting of an electric pipe. This accident is a warning right in the midst of the buntin season, may be classified along with the other cases of "didn't know it was so."

The code of morals of the most ecclesiastical man is oftentimes derived from the telegraphic code. Detective Frawley wrote this message to Newark: "I have stillman locked up at police headquarters in New York." The message as received by the county prosecutor read: "I have still on locked up police headquarters in New York. Not so virtuous."

The new army muskets are said to have passed satisfactory tests. The old ones have done such first-class work it is a pity to throw them away.

Smallpox Epidemic in Michigan.

Since the first of January, 1902, outbreaks of smallpox in 714 localities in Michigan have been caused to cease and in 400, or 55 per cent, of the cases, the disease was restricted to the one household where the first case occurred. Notwithstanding this record of success, the disease is still spreading, because in the one household where the first case occurred, the disease was not reported to the health officer, and the disease was not reported to the health officer, and the disease was not reported to the health officer.
