Life is a conundrum that all have to give up at last.

The British public find that the war taxes will linger a little while longer.

"Gosh," said the skunk, holding his nose as the gasoline automobile whizzed past.

The Mexicans must have sent a "Hell Roaring Jake" or two after the Yaqui Indians.

Berlin is threatened with a crusade against vice. Is that another Yankee pelt trying to work in?

Dr. Mark Twain would carry the state of Missouri for any office he might want, from president down.

Peace for Great Britain is not without its terrors. The poet laureate will feel as if he ought to write something.

Whenever the President goes out horseback riding now he passes at least forty snaphooters in a given time.

Victims of the antiquated shell game look with envy on the Missisippi river fisherman who found the $10,000 pearl.

About a year ago Kansas was suffering from a drought. Now no Kansas farmer is considered well equipped without a boat.

John W. Gates is going to help build a $20,000 hotel in New York. We can all be assured that the poker room will be unequalled.

The present British cabinet is almost entirely composed of journalists. In the next cabinet, maybe, the newspaper men will have a show.

Perhaps it is fair to predict that the new French political party organized by cooks, when it gains the ascendancy will form a kitchen cabinet.

A German engineer is training a team of eagles to steer his balloon. American flyers may be inspired to attempt to "hit his chariot to a star."

In the lawsuit involving the merits of the French opera engagement Judge Halsey takes the novel ground that actresses really understand grand opera.

Now two French quacks are advertising books in which they exploit a tonic that loves a nation. Love, as understood by many Frenchmen, undoubtedly is.

A Massachusetts clergyman asserts that "if there is a hell a place should be provided for Sunday golfers." Can't even a minister speak of golf without damning?

When a girl secures damages in a lawsuit because the jury is said to be influenced by her beauty she is about as fortunate as it is possible to get without dying.

Mark Twain wrote when he visited the land of the hooped the other day. He was probably thinking of the digestion he had when he left those dear old haunts.

David Smith of Saginaw, Mich., died suddenly just as he was taking a chew of tobacco. He had only reached the tender age of 11. Let us have a solemn warning to all users of the weed.

If England were desirous of breaking up the cordial understanding, it could secure immediate results by mentioning a person of the name of Astor as a possible ambassador to America.

It has been decided by the courts that a man's broken heart is worth $25. This is not too high a valuation where a man's head will permit him to bare his lacerated cardiac organ to a jury.

The Chicago George Washington who alleges from the pulpit that he never led or stole while a child tactfully refrains from any exposure of his methods when he arrived at the years of discretion.

The people along the streets in New York have begun to throw tin pans at the swiftly-passing automobiles. By aiming carefully several rods ahead of the mark one or two of the throwers succeeded in hitting it.

The sheriff of New York has just summoned a jury panel of fourteen men who aggregate wealth running over $1,000,000,000 mark. It is understood that they will not be permitted to sit on any trust cases.

A Baltimore man who was arrested the other night with a pair of stolen trousers in his possession was fined because he stole them because he was hungry. To make the excuse plausible he should have grabbed a straw hat.

A man out in Wisconsin thought he could hypnotize a savage bull. The bull didn't know it. This led to unpleasant results in which a good deal of ground was paved up, and a man sewed up, and another scientific theory was placed on the back shelf.

Alfred Beit, the successor of Cecil Rhodes in the development of South Africa, has been out with a record of having given more to charity in the last ten years than the Rothschilds.

Simon Sam has gone to Paris to spend his money, and there is no indication that the Parisians will draw any color line while his cash lasts.

What a joke Post Laureate Austin could work off on the critics by turning out a coronation ode with some copy at the Wisconsin Land and Lumber company at Honesville.
