

HASTE NOT, REST NOT

Without haste, without rest; Blind the flowers that you tread; With the dew on their heads; Storm of sunshine, guard it well; Head not flowers that round them bloom—

Haste not, rest not; calmly wait; Haste not, rest not; calmly wait; Haste not, rest not; calmly wait; Haste not, rest not; calmly wait;

Without haste, without rest; Blind the flowers that you tread; With the dew on their heads; Storm of sunshine, guard it well; Head not flowers that round them bloom—

Haste not, rest not; calmly wait; Haste not, rest not; calmly wait; Haste not, rest not; calmly wait; Haste not, rest not; calmly wait;

Without haste, without rest; Blind the flowers that you tread; With the dew on their heads; Storm of sunshine, guard it well; Head not flowers that round them bloom—

Lying on the floor, dressed as he had been the night before, with a look of intense horror on his face...

"The wage of sin is death." "Bending over the prostrate form he took from the clenched, cold hand several long strands of jet-black hair..."

"My Dear Jack: Nita has troubled me again—five minutes after you left her with your car, and I am old enough to have a presentiment that it will be fulfilled, if anything happens to me, guard my heart from the public and know that Nita's love has been yours."

"Nita" reads the letter, and, as he looks at it, his mind is filled with the thought of "Dicks" hand that fateful morning he knew the truth; whatever passion between Dick and Nita—

"Why Faith Could Not Cure." "Every time we meet this Scientist I see a new occasion for wonder and awe to dwell upon the wonders which could be performed through faith."

"This is Still Going On." "Daniel O'Connell once told his friends of a common an old story of bribery. A farmer in the county Wick was traveling near Louisa, Va. on his return for his vote for a member of the Lotus family."

"His Sympathy." "A Chicago lady who had a birthday recently received as a present from one of her friends a bill. Accompanying the money was a note in which the writer, after explaining why she had given the bill, said she had had the cash made some tender references to bygone days and dear old friends."

"Oriental Logic." "A man bought three pounds of meat and three pounds of rice. He had a cook for dinner, and then went his way to his place of business in the bazaar. The wife was hungry and ate the rice."

"Progress of the African Railway." "The Cape to Cairo Railway has been completed as far as the Zambesi, where a great steel bridge is being erected. The bridge will carry the line across the river at the Victoria falls."

"Men wonder where the summer girl was stowed away during the winter."

PATHEIC INSCRIPTION ON GRAVE OF FRIENDLESS AMERICAN IN MEXICO. "When I was in Mexico not long ago," said a New Yorker, who has interests in that country, "I went out to inspect a grave yard, but I found one of the cemeteries. My attention was called to a plain slab on which was this inscription:—"

"To the Memory of: SAM KING, AMERICAN. He Always Protected the Woman Who Had a Child. That would excite the curiosity of almost any man, but my friend 'he' knew what it meant."

Diary of an Automobilst covering One Short Week. Monday—Hought a 49-horse power Panhard. Christened it the Spook. Engaged a Swede for chauffeur. Bought a pair of goggles. Took a trip to the lake."

Tuesday—Was out on the road for the first time. Rana like a watch. Think I'll like this game. Wednesday—Took a trip to the lake. Thursday—Negotiated a corner at full speed. Wasn't much hit, but let the Swede take the Spook to the repair shop. It is now in the shop."

How Booth Got Skull for Use in "Hamlet". The elder Booth acquired a skull for use in "Hamlet" in an odd manner, according to a story in "Son and Heir". The transaction, somewhat in the nature of a barter, took place in a field, when he took a horse from a noble and robe of wool. It was stated that at that time was a capital offense to have a horse and a robe of wool. There was a man named Fontaine who was over-zealous, and when asked where he got the animal said, "I captured him in a field back in the States."

Notwithstanding his youthfulness, he is 7 feet tall and weighs 289 pounds. He is the son of a farmer. His mother is not over 5 feet tall, while his father is medium sized.

MINING IN THE RAND. Entire Mineral Development of the Transvaal Very Recent. The entire mineral development of the Transvaal has taken place within the last few years. It was prohibited up to 1868, at which time the government, being in dire financial straits, threw open the gold and silver mines to prospecting, even going so far as to offer a bonus for the discovery of profitable mines. The resultant prospecting in the early twenties led to the discovery of quartz veins and the inauguration of mining in several parts of the northern Transvaal. The Leydenburg district first attracted attention in 1855, when exploration of the alluvial deposits began, followed later by vein mining. The first gold was discovered in 1854, and the conglomerate or "barrel" beds of the Witwatersrand—destined to supersede all others in importance—were discovered in 1855. In that year a small stamp battery was erected to crush quartz from a vein a few miles west of Johannesburg. The first crushing of conglomerate was made, but it was not until April, 1857, that a battery of three stamps was erected to treat the ore of the Witwatersrand. This was followed by the erection of other batteries, and the output of gold for 1857 was 23,000 ounces.
