

The Daffodils

I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
Bright, like the stars of heaven,
Tossing and dancing in the breeze.

Continued as the stars that shine,
And twinkle on the milky way,
They few that wander through the shade
Among the margins of a bay.

Ten thousand saw I at a glance,
Tossing their heads in sprightly dance.

The waves beside them danced, but they
Outdidthe sparkling waves in gayety,
A poet could not but be gay,
In such a place to do and see.

I gazed and gazed, but little thought
Of weariness, or that a day had brought.

For oft, when on my couch I lie
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude,
And then my faithful friend I see,
And others, who come like I do.

TWO CENTURIES OLD

TOWN IN MASSACHUSETTS INCORPORATED IN 1710.

Byfield Boasts of Many Places of Historic Interest—Manufactured First Cotton Cloth in America—Home of the First Longfellow.

(Special Letter.)
Two hundred years ago, some thirty families of Newbury, Mass., who were too far distant from the church of Newbury, and from the newly established church of the West Parish, and took the name of Newbury, or Quiescenton. Four years later the name Byfield was taken, and in 1710, incorporated. Byfield was named in honor of Judge Nathaniel Byfield, who lived within the parish.

The first meeting house was built in 1702, after the pattern of the churches of the day. Its spire was mounted by a gilded weathercock. The second church, and still in the possession of Byfield's descendants, the second church was erected in 1746, and burned in 1821. Eight months later the present church was built. It is situated in the center of the parish, and the line separating the present town of Newbury and Georgetown passes through the building.

The parish has today its regular organization, and its original limits. Parish meetings are called annually, as they were 200 years ago, and are marked by the same solemnity and decorum.

Very many places of historic interest are located within the limits of this ancient parish. At Newbury Falls, the deacon's house in 1811. On this location the first cotton cloth, first broadcloth and the first cut nails made in America were manufactured. The first cotton cloth, first broadcloth and the first cut nails made in America were manufactured.

Byfield also is the original home of the poet and all others of the name. The old cellar remains, and the mooring block, from which the James of the Massachusetts mounted their boats. Not far from here is the ancestral home of the Mooyses. Here William Moody settled in 1635, and here the present secretary of the navy, the Hon. William H. Moody, was born. On Warren street is the home of Col. Albert Pike of civil war fame. Paul Bunbury, the inventor of many of the household comforts of today, lived in Byfield. From him we get coffee mills, shoe polish, etc.

Near by the meeting house is the building used for a seminary—the first female seminary in America. Here Miss Grant, Mary Leonard, and Miss Nowell were educated as pupils. In the parish also is Dunster Academy, the oldest academy in the United States, established in 1754.

From its doors have come out many illustrious in state and nation. Two presidents of Harvard, two chief justices of the commonwealth, a minister to Great Britain, an English general of world wide fame, an American admiral of the revolution and a long list of the commonwealth in chief in the service of state and nation.

In the parish also was the first full scale American built by John Pearson in 1843. The site of this building is now occupied by the Glen mills, manufacturers of breadstuffs.

Famous Library belongs to Italy. Parma's famous Palace Library now belongs to Italy, by an arrangement with the former donor. The latter gives up all claims in consideration of the Italian government's paying the debts of Duke Charles III, who was assassinated in 1854, amounting to 1,300,000 francs.

Claims Spiritualistic Picture. Richard M. Shaw, of Central Falls, R. I., recently had a photograph taken of his twenty-one-months-old son, and in the corner appeared the face of a relative who, Mr. Shaw claims, has been dead fourteen years.

Buried Near Scene of Triumph. It is not generally known that the body of Fred Archer, the famous English jockey, is buried within two hundred yards of the winning post at the Chertbridge.

Shark Caught With Hand Line. What is known as an angel shark, an ugly fish with an eight-inch mouth containing three rows of teeth, has been caught with a hand line at Pellis.

Improvements at Boulogne Harbor. Among other improvements at the port of Boulogne a French government scheme provides for a connection of an Atlantic steamer berth 920 feet long and 100 feet wide, with a water depth of twenty-five feet.

Cucumbers a Profitable Crop. Cucumbers for pickles are a profitable crop in Iowa, when the food does not drown them out. The average yield is 400 bushels an acre, and the price is 50 cents a bushel.

Notable Family Reunion. There was a notable family reunion at Welland, Ont., last week at which the six children of the late Jacob Pound assembled to celebrate the birthday of "the baby of the family," who had attained the age of 80 years.

Policeman's Pictures Sell. Two landscapes painted by Constable E. T. Jones, the Leeds (England) policeman-artist, have been purchased by the Royal Cambrian exhibition, Conway.

AS THE WORLD REVOLVES

WHERE CRIME IS UNKNOWN.

The recent death of his ninety-five year old Thomas Watson, the "great nor" of the small island of Tristan d'Acunha, in the South Atlantic ocean, attracts attention to a little community which is practically isolated from communication with the rest of the world.

Tristan d'Acunha was discovered by the Portuguese in 1506, and formal possession was taken of this small speck in the ocean in 1871 by a company of British artillery, the better to keep a watch on Napoleon, at that time a prisoner in St. Helena. On the death of Napoleon the soldiers were withdrawn, with the exception of Corporal Gillis and two companions, who, with some whaling men, were the founders of the present settlement.

The colony flourished and numbered in 1829 twenty-seven souls, and in 1887 there was a population of ninety-seven. Property is held in common and there is no strong drink, and no crime, while the inhabitants are healthy and long-lived. The oldest inhabitant acts as governor. A ship of war passes the island an annual visit and brings the only mail that ever reaches the inhabitants. The settlement is in a fertile part of the island, and is called New Edinburgh.

The population has been for some years almost stationary, and is affected by migrations to the Cape. Watson, the deacon's governor, went to Tristan d'Acunha from the Cape six to five years ago and never afterwards left the island.
