MYSTERY IN HIS RECEPTION.

Diplomat Puzzled at the Greeting Accorded to Him.

The Hon. Addison C. Harris of Indianapolis, ex-Minister to Austria, related an interesting experience from the campaign of 1900 a few evenings ago at the New Willard. He had been invited to address a political meeting one afternoon at Fort Wayne. Alighting from the train he found himself in the center of a galaxy of expectant young men and women, wearing badges marked "Reception Committee." Appreciating the supposed compliment, he advanced, extending his hand, and was greeted enthusiastically and invited to go right along to the "church." He looked confused, and said he was not aware that he was to go to any church.

"Why, aren't you the minister?" inquired one of the young ladies, naively.

"Yes, I am a minister," said Mr. Harris, recalling his diplomatic post, "but I hadn't expected to go to any church," he continued slowly, looking puzzled.

"Perhaps you would prefer to go to Sister Smith's," said another young lady.

"I don't know Sister Smith," replied Mr. Harris. "I was under the impression that I would go directly to the rink, where I am to deliver a Republican speech this afternoon."

"Oh!" exclaimed a chorus of feminine voices, and the mystery was then cleared up by the explanation that the reception committee was at the train to meet a Baptist minister who was expected to address an assembly of that denomination.—Washington Post.

SIMPLICITY OF DR. LORENZ.

Great Surgeon in No Way Inflated by His Success.

Probably no one who has encountered Dr. Adolf Lorenz, the eminent Vienna surgeon, has failed to be struck with a certain simplicity in his manner that differentiates him from the more familiar type of medical men in this country. Whose sphinx-like visage and air of imperturbability make of him a colossal mystery to the layman. Dr. Lorenz appears to be frankness impersonated. He is just a man who has by hard work learned to do a thing or two better than anybody else, and is not at all puffed up about it. Not a young doctor saw him operate but was greatly enthused and encouraged. And through all his clinical work there has run a refreshing current of humor that on occasions has fairly convulsed his hoaped-up audiences.

At one clinic Dr. Lorenz was explaining how a little girl who had been operated on for double dislocation of the hip, would be able to move around in play, notwithstanding that her legs were held by plaster casts at right angles with her body, with the limbs free to move only below the knee. To the amazement of everybody there, particularly the big wigs of the profession, Dr. Lorenz, to illustrate, assumed a squatting attitude, with his legs in a position like that of the little girl, and executed a comical hippity-hop around the room.

"Like a little toad," he said, in his dislocated English, and a roar of laughter went over the assemblage.—New York Mail and Express.

FLOWERS LOVE AND HATE.

Claim That They Are Endowed With Passions Like Human Beings.

According to a French scientist, flowers are endowed with passions like human beings, and there are few among them which cannot love and hate fervently.

"They have their sympathies and antipathies," he explains, "and if we study them closely we can easily find them out. Roses are passionately fond of some flowers, and flourish when near them. On the other hand, they speedily wither when placed near other flowers, and we must infer that it is because the latter are not congenial to them. Heliotropes and violets have a lively sympathy for each other, and in like manner there seems to be a warm friendship between pansies and carnations.

"If it can be proved that flowers can love and hate," says a German writer, commenting on this statement, "it ought not to be difficult to prove that they have souls."

A Girl of Discernment.

Madge—You should see all the new things Tillie has.

Marjorie—She told me she was making some purchases.

Madge—That's hardly a name for it. I never saw so many lovely things in my life. Why, she has a new watch, three stunning suits, a fur cloak, some Turkish rugs, one of those big revolving bookstands, and sets of all the popular authors. I wonder what it all means?

Marjorie—Why, she's going to be married at once, you little fool.

Madge—I don't know why I should have guessed that from seeing so many lovely things in her house.

Marjorie—You would have, my dear, if you had known as much about them as I do. She has bought them all on the installment plan, and it will be up to her husband to make good nearly all the payments.

A Remarkable City.

One of the most remarkable cities in the world is Kelburg, near Cracow, Poland. Besides being situated underground, it is excavated entirely in rock salt. The inhabitants, to the number of over 3,000, are of course workers in the famous salt mines, and all the streets and houses are of the purest white imaginable. One of the most famous features of the city is the cathedral, carved in salt and lit with electric light, and when the late Czar Alexander visited it eleven years ago he was so fascinated with the magnificent effect of the light upon the crystal walls that he presented the cathedral with a jeweled altar cross. Such a thing as infectious disease is unknown in Kelburg—in fact, the majority of the inhabitants die of old age.

"What I Told My Wife" is the title of a new book. It is needless to say that it is fiction.

How They Wooed.

An English Judge, not long deceased, used to tell a diverting story of his wooing. In those days he was a struggling and obscure barrister without even the prospect of an income and the lady upon whom he had set his affections was the daughter of a purse-proud tradesman with a high-sounding name, who was strongly opposed to giving his daughter to a "penniless lawyer."

"Do you know, sir," the father thundered when he was asked for his daughter's hand—"do you know, sir, that my daughter's ancestors have all been noblemen and that one of them was a favorite minister of Queen Elizabeth?"

"Oh, yes, I know all that," the young barrister placidly answered; "and do you know that Queen Elizabeth once slapped your ancestor's face, and unless you are more civil I will do the same for you?"

It is scarcely surprising that so bad and daring a lover had his way in the end, even in the face of such a barrier of ghostly noble ancestors.

The late Prince Bismarck, it is said, won his wife by a similar coup de main. Although he had not known the lady of his love more than a few days and her parents were not even aware of his existence, he presented himself one day before them and boldly asked permission to marry their daughter. In vain the father fumed and blustered and threatened to have the young man forcibly ejected from the house for his impertinence.

"I am sorry to annoy you, sir," the young soldier said, "but I must respectfully decline to leave the house until I have your consent."

Nor did he, although the consent was given in these ungracious words:

"Well, I suppose you must have your way, but I cannot compliment my daughter on her choice of a mule for a husband."

Disraeli on Love.

The sale of a batch of letters to Disraeli by his sister, written before the days of his fame, has thrown light some interesting passages in which "Dizzy," as he always was to his sister, was very candid.

In describing a visit to Wyndham Lewis's he writes: "By the by, would you like Lady Z. for a sister-in-law? She is very clever, has $250,000 and is domestic. As for love, all my friends who married for love or beauty either beat their wives or live apart from them. That is literally the case. I may commit many follies in life but I never intend to marry for love, which I am sure, is a quotation of infelicity."

Within four years Disraeli married Wyndham Lewis's prosperous widow.

In a letter written four years before he became Minister of Finance, Disraeli thus described a debate in the House of Commons: "It was one of the finest we have had in two years. Bulwer spoke, but is physically disqualified, and in spite of all his exertions can never succeed. I heard Macaulay's best speeches and Sheil and Charles Grant. Macaulay was admirable, but between ourselves I could floor them all. This is entre nous. I have never been more confident of anything than that I could carry everything before me in the House. The thing will come."—New York Sun.

MILLIONS LEFT AS PRIZE FOR LAWYERS

The celebrated Thomas divorce case, the hearing of which in Chicago last winter was attended with a widespread interest, will be recalled by the death of Gen. Samuel Thomas, which occurred in New York last week.

The estate of Gen. Thomas is variously estimated at from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

But one grandchild lives to claim a share of the estate. She is Augusta Eleanor Thomas, who resides in New York with her mother, Mrs. Harold E. Thomas. Mrs. Thomas is the wife of the General's son, who resides in Chicago.

Col. Burry and Herbert E. Bradley, who represented Mrs. Thomas in the divorce proceedings of last winter, will make a fight for an equal division of the great estate, while it is almost equally certain that Harold Thomas will insist on receiving the entire estate for his own.

This divorce suit filed by Harold E. Thomas brought out an interesting story of love, romance and some tragedy.

Mrs. Thomas before her marriage to Thomas was the wife of his uncle, David Porter, a wealthy druggist and manufacturer of Kansas City. Porter was 60 years old. His bride, who before her marriage was Miss Ada Blandy, was 19 years old.

They lived together for a year, at the end of which time Harold Thomas, sent by his father on a visit, appeared in Kansas City, and became deeply impressed with his uncle's pretty bride.

Whether Porter felt this or not will never be known. One day he was found dead in his store. He had taken four different kinds of poison and then turned on the gas.

Three weeks after his death Harold Thomas married the widow at Council Bluffs.

When Thomas brought proceedings against his wife on the ground of desertion he declared that his child had died and that another had been substituted, but he afterward admitted the falsity of this statement on the stand. The case was closed suddenly, however, by the judge, who dismissed the jury, declaring that they were prejudiced in favor of Mrs. Thomas.

VON STERNBERG IS POPULAR

New German Ambassador Will Be Welcomed at Washington.

Baron Speck von Sternberg, who succeeds Herr von Holleben at Washington temporarily and may be made ambassador, was formerly secretary of the German embassy at Washington. He came into much prominence as one of the German commissioners in the Samoa conference three years ago, and later figured in the negotiations following the boxer outbreak in China. His wife is an American, the daughter of Charles Langham, an Idaho mine owner and a niece of Arthur Langham of Louisville, Ky. They were married two years ago in London.

When they were both in subordinate positions in Washington Col. Roosevelt and Baron von Sternberg used to hunt, walk and ride together. They became quite chummy. Similarity of tastes drew them together. Each liked boxing and fencing, and they had many a friendly bout. The kaiser knows this, and has shown considerable tact in shelving the pompous von Holleben and naming Speck as his successor. Especially in view of the fact that England is to be represented by Herbert, who, likewise, while an under-secretary, formed similar relations with Roosevelt. Now the German and English ambassadors will be in a position to slap him on the back and call him Teddy.

Baron Speck von Sternberg.

Statesmen Have Narrow Escape.

Senator Frye, president pro tem of the senate, narrowly escaped being quarantined by the board of health when a case of smallpox was found in the Hamilton hotel, where he lives. A dozen or more senators and representatives live there, and much uneasiness was felt until the health office decided that only Representative Thompson of Alabama, whose brother had the disease, would have to be quarantined. Mr. Thompson was removed to the detention hospital and Representative Thompson was placed in quarantine in a building near the hospital.

Rhodes Scholarships.

Apropos of Cecil Rhodes foundation at Oxford, Goldwin Smith gives it as his opinion that, as a general rule, a young man had better be brought up in the country in which he is to live, and that, even if the superior, he will probably lose more than he will gain by expatriation. Moreover, Prof. Smith declares that as good instruction is now to be had in America as anywhere in Europe.

UNION ARMY LEADER DEAD

Major General von Vegesack Passes Away at Stockholm, Sweden.

Maj. Gen. Ernest von Vegesack, officer of the Swedish army and former general in the Northern army during the American civil war, died last week at Stockholm, Sweden at the age of 82.

GEN. VON VEGESACK

Gen. von Vegesack was a distinguished Swedish soldier, who had in his veins the fighting blood of several generations of Northland nobles. He held the rank of brigadier general in the Union army and participated in all the big battles of the civil war. At Antietam he particularly distinguished himself. On his return to Sweden he was highly honored by the government and since that time he held numerous important positions in King Oscar's army. In 1900 Gen. von Vegesack sent a letter of sympathy and comradeship to the meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic at Chicago.

Cost of Mobilizing German Army.

A German review has lately published some striking figures as to financial burdens incident to a general mobilization of the army. The total of the armed forces in the empire is rather more than ten millions. Taking as a basis the seventy pence per man per day, which was the average cost during the Franco-German war, the "Berliner Tageblatt" points out that the daily cost of the German army on a war footing would be $16,000,000.

Jay Cooke's Costly Hats.

Jay Cooke, the venerable financier, always wears a felt hat of a pale fawn color. Three or four of these hats are given each year to Mr. Cooke by his friend and neighbor, John B. Stetson. They are made of the fur of a South American squirrel that is only to be captured among the heights of the Andes. They have to be so carefully and slowly made and their material is so costly that to buy and sell them would not pay.

Senator Vest Corrects a Statement.
