CHAPTER XXI.—Continued. Crystal walked as far as the long-boat, which was checked about the... hand upon the flames of spirits of wine.

Crystal looked at the captain, who held the little black baby... "Ay, that's fine, sure enough."

ed was burning hull down under the horizon, and that some large clouds... "I am going below to get my supper," says Crystal, and he sank through the companion-latch.

CHAPTER XXII. Pope's Death. Nothing that Pope was capable of... "Yes, I know you would grasp my idea. With thy twelfth of a crew we go away for a port round the Horn."

"We can do no good," says Pope. "I can do no good," says Mr. Crystal. "I can do no good," says Mr. Crystal.

"Ob, Captain Pope," she cried, with a sidelong look at the helmsman, who was very feebly swimming. "I will first let me go home!"

"I have never seen her," said Pope. "I have never seen her," said Pope. "I have never seen her," said Pope.

"I have never seen her," said Pope. "I have never seen her," said Pope. "I have never seen her," said Pope.

"I have never seen her," said Pope. "I have never seen her," said Pope. "I have never seen her," said Pope.

"I have never seen her," said Pope. "I have never seen her," said Pope. "I have never seen her," said Pope.
