WESTERN CANADA'S IMMIGRATION. Rapid Settlement of the Wheat Fields Lying North of the 49th Parallel.

"Canada has anticipated a very heavy immigration this year, and she now has figures to show that she is actually getting it in a way to meet all her expectations.

"Of the immigration of this spring a third has been accounted for by Great Britain, the figure being 16,475. This is three times as large as the British immigration of the corresponding months of the preceding year.

"The above editorial article taken from the columns of the Chicago Herald of May 26th, shows the condition of the Canadian immigration, which as pointed out, has had a constant growth—a marvelous increasing growth—for the past six or seven years, until this year, it is confidently assumed the increase to Canada's population, by way of immigration, will exceed 100,000.

Those who wish to learn more of the country can secure illustrated leaflets, pamphlets, etc., giving full and reliable data issued under government authority, by applying to any of the authorized agents of the Canadian government.

A Wish

Miss Be is not beside the hill; A bewitching smile shall soothe my ear; A wistful sorrow that turns my hair; With many a fall shall I gaze afar.

The swallow, 't'neath my thatch Shall twitter from her clay-bowdler's nest;—Oh, that I could be a bird, and share my meal, a welcome guest!

Around my ivied porch shall drink The fragrant flower that thrills the eye; And Lucy, at her wheel, shall sing In rusted gown and apron blue.

The village church among the trees, My eyes shall gaze, and I shall see With many a peep shall smile my breeze And point with taper spire to heaven.

With my pen, shall I write my own story, I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love.

With my pen, shall I write my own story, I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love.

With my pen, shall I write my own story, I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love.

With my pen, shall I write my own story, I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love.

With my pen, shall I write my own story, I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love; I will tell you of my life and my love.

"Oh, Lemmy!"

"And a collar!" "Lemmy!" "You shall have 'em both if you will do me a little favor." "I'll do anything in the world for you."

"But this is something you are not to do—you are not to tell."—Alice Louise Lee in Boston Globe.

Woman's Nerves

Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability, bordering upon hysteria? Are your spirits easily affected so that one minute you laugh, and the next fall into convulsive weeping?

Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound; pain in the ovaries, and especially between the shoulders; sometimes loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia, and almost continually cross and snappy, with a tendency to cry at the least provocation?

How Mrs. Holland, of Philadelphia, suffered among the finest physicians in the country, none of whom could help her—finally cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For over two years I was a constant sufferer from extreme nervousness, indigestion, and dizziness. Menstruation was irregular, and I was feeling of great lassitude and weakness."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was in poor health for several years. I had female trouble and was not able to do my household work. I felt tired, very nervous, and could not sleep."

"I thank you for the relief I have obtained, and I hope that every woman troubled with female weakness will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial."

"I will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all of the virtues of this medicine."

"How shall the fact that it will help them be made plain? Surely you cannot wish to remain weak, and sick, and discouraged."

Searles' Rummage Sale

The house was cold and cheerless. Even the cat howled dimly at the back door, preferring the atmosphere around his ears.

Lemuel pulled his overcoat collar up around his ears. Then he hat down to meet it. He was seated in his accustomed chair at the dining table, and surveyed the room with long, faded streaks conspicuously showing themselves a quarter of an inch from every seam.

Lemuel had the customer to allow him to send the garment around the corner to a dyer, who would make the entire garment one shade darker and so conceal the streaks.

"Lemmy, what is the matter?" "Take 'em." The tailor followed him to the door. "I forgot to tell you that I was obliged to refine them throughout, as the old lining was so worn."

"Searles half way down the stairs made a remark. The tailor did not hear distinctly but accepted it as a pleasant 'Good day,' and returned it. One week later Searles was seated in the train, homeward bound.

"I have just finished my rummage sale. I have sold everything I own, and I have not a cent left. I have sold everything I own, and I have not a cent left. I have sold everything I own, and I have not a cent left."
