

Clean and Dirty Milk.

From the Farmers' Review: Many dairymen apparently fall to recognize the fact that when milking and man food and that it should be treated as such. In many dairies the milker goes to his taak with solled hands and dust-laden clothing and without so much as brushing the loose dast and dirt from the cox. The fact that the milk is the fact that the milk is the milk in the milk. No other food is produced in such filthy surroundings as is frequently the case with milk and no other food will aborb offers or readily and become talted to quickly the milk produced under the most sanitary conditions possible. One can judge something of the amount of filth in milk by the sediment found at the bottom, but only a small part and the bottom, but only a small part of the milk is milk part of the milk, change it into lactic acid.
