DESERTER SHOT.

Ran to Escape—Guard Called Halt! Then Shot.

Frederick C. Matthews, a raw recruit, held as a prisoner at Fort Wayne for desertion, it is believed by design, offered himself as a target for his guard and was shot dead. He had tried to hang himself on Friday.

Guard Frank J. Hilla took a squad of prisoners, according to custom, to a wood pile, in the eastern portion of the grounds, about 8 o'clock Monday forenoon, to cut some wood. Before reaching the wood pile and about ten rods from the eastern fence which separates the reservation from the grounds of the Edison Illuminating Co., Matthews broke away from the guard and made for the high board fence. Hilla called to the prisoner to halt, but Matthews paid no attention to the order, although he well understood that it meant he would be shot if he tried to shoot him. He selected a place to escape where there was no obstruction to dodge behind.

Either the prisoner's foot slipped or else he purposely faltered to afford the guard a better aim. Hilla again called upon him to stop, and knelt to the ground for a more careful aim. Matthews kept on, and Hilla fired and Matthews fell forward on his face.

The guards found Matthews breathing heavily, and on turning him over saw blood running from him in a stream. The guards had been armed with a mob rifle, the cartridges of which contain several projectiles. Two of these had taken effect and one passed clean through him.

"You got me all right," said the wounded man feebly to the trembling and agitated guard, who held up the head of the dying man.

He was carried promptly to the hospital, but an examination showed that he had been fatally injured. Major Ganby, in charge of the hospital, found that one of the bullets had gone through the liver, and that this wound alone would have caused death.

As the surgeons worked over him Matthews exclaimed:

"O, forgive me, mother! I've done a lot of things that I ought not to have done; forgive me!"

Rousing up and speaking to the surgeon, Matthews said earnestly.

"Don't blame the sentry. Don't blame him, don't blame him. He gave me a fair show."

Twenty minutes after he was shot he died.

After the Storm.

Ernest Cook, a farmer of Mattawan, has been very persistent in wooing his divorced wife, who was separated from him five years ago, the divorce being granted in Van Buren county, the wife's home, on the extreme county. Both parties to the divorce were in England at the time the divorce was granted. Mr. Cook returned to Chicago, where he engaged in the lumber business, but found life unendurable without his wife. He has made several trips to England during the five years to try and induce her to marry him again, and the last one, which he made in June, was successful. Mrs. Cook, accompanied by her parents, has arrived from Bristol, England, and the marriage will take place in Kalamazoo.

Not Properly Ventilated.

The St. Clair Tunnel company is held responsible by Coroner Logie's jury in Sarnia for the death of the six trainmen in the recent tunnel disaster. One or more of the guns going wide of the mark, struck young Bird fully in the chest, killing him instantly.
