AGRICULTURE

The Yield to Expect.

A farmer should have some fairly well-fixed idea of how much crop he should get from a certain piece of land and then hunt about for the reason if his expectations are not realized. It does not pay to be too easy with Nature. The exacting man is the one that gets most from her. We have been surprised to see certain men satisfied with the very meager returns they received from land. The returns were seldom more than enough to pay the expenses of growing the crop. Yet they were satisfied apparently and merely remarked, "Oh, well, that land never does better than that." The men in question belong to that group known as "hand farmers." That is, they farm by the use of their hands and not by the use of their heads. We know of a place where some of this kind reside. A man that farms with his brains came along and said, "How much corn did you get this year?" "About twenty bushels." "Why don't you get more?" "I don't know; the land never does better than that amount here." The man that farms with his head thought it worth while to find out for the sake of these farmers what was the trouble. As the land was rich in humus he asked one of them if he would use some potassium if he supplied it. He replied he would and he did. On the piece treated with potassium the yield the next season was at the rate of 65 bushels of corn to the acre. That showed that the land lacked potassium, yet the men that farmed with their hands had never tried to find out whether it lacked anything or not. Why could not they have done the work of finding out?

Some people are helpless in circumstances and others try to control the circumstances. Those that try to control the circumstances are wise, for the circumstances can generally be controlled in a remarkable degree when a man sets himself about it. A farmer should not be contented with any yield less than a good yield, as the average yield is usually a money loser.

There are few farms where the yields of crops cannot be greatly increased except those farms under the management of our most advanced farmers. The problem should be not how to increase the number of acres producing poor crops, but how to produce a greatly increased yield on the acres already under tillage.

How One Thing Changes Many.

A recent writer on Argentine agriculture says that were it not for alfalfa Argentina would occupy an unimportant place in the list of beef producing nations, at least so far as export beef is concerned. The people of the United States supposed that they had gained control of the English market and could hold it for all time. But along came the alfalfa plant and the South American was at once able to send beef to Europe to compete with American beef. One little thing like that changes the course of commerce, even of agricultural commerce. Up to the present time nations have been so careless of each other that one hardly cared to inquire what the other was doing. But the nation that finds a sharp competition arising where there was no competition before is forced to change its methods. The changed conditions are that make it possible. We must henceforth compete with alfalfa in Argentina. Such is the real fact. The beef is merely the way of marketing the alfalfa. But as a result of that one thing entering into the problem we may have to change our methods in several ways.

Preparing Potting Soil.

On every farm it happens in the spring that the farmer wants a supply of rich dirt filled with vegetable matter and that will cause the tender seedlings to push forward with the greatest possible speed. This dirt is called potting dirt, but it is used also in the hotbeds. To have it ready for use in the spring its preparation must begin in the fall long before the ground is frozen. Sod and manure are the elements out of which good potting soil is compounded. If the sod is clay sod a good deal of sand will also have to be added to it in the spring. At this time, however, the sod and manure may be mixed. A layer of sod and a layer of manure piled up to any height to suit is the foundation. In applying the sand it must be remembered that a good compost of this kind requires in it finally at least three times as much sand as clay.

Cotton Seed Meal and Pigs.

It is well for swine raisers to go slow in the feeding of cotton seed meal to swine. There is much in the bulletins about it from time to time, and new men are trying to find out how to feed it to the pigs and not kill them. The experiment stations can better afford to lose pigs than can the farmers. It is safe also not to take stock in the assertion of the wise fellow who can tell you just how to feed it successfully. He thinks he knows; but it is just as well to let him try it on his own pigs. When the stations have found sure a way of feeding it successfully will be time enough for the common farmer to risk killing his swine.

A New Milk Preservative.

The French are experimenting in the making of a milk preserver from which they hope great things. It is to have antiseptic properties and yet be harmless to the human stomach. If they are able to bring this about great things may result. They call the substance oxygenated water. It kills the microbes in the milk, but by the end of six hours it has itself disappeared, having changed into oxygen and water.

Western agriculturists agree that present range methods are wasteful. The grass on the great public pastures is destroyed by close cropping and too much tramping.

A NEW THEORY ABOUT INDIGESTION.

The Dyspeptic Must Help Cure Himself.

The old way of trying to cure dyspepsia with artificial digestives has been practically abandoned. Common sense teaches that instead of taking remedies to produce artificial digestion the stomach should be stimulated to do its own work. The Luxakola Co., 45 Vesey St., New York, are revolutionizing the old fogy notions about dyspepsia, and the demand for their new remedy, Pepsikola, is sweeping the country.

Acting on the belief that those suffering with indigestion should have intelligent advice as to diet, hygiene, and physical exercise, the above company have prepared a remarkable little treatise, "Advice to Dyspeptics," obtainable of your druggist free, or mailed on request.

Pepsikola costs 25 cents, and there is not one person in all the world but will be benefited by taking it.

Patterson, night policeman, of Nashua, Iowa, writes: "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lungs and tried at least a half-dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. School Notes

EDITED BY THE PUP LS.

Editor-in-Chief—CLARENCE WEST.

No tardy marks in the 6th and 7th grades yet this year.

Mrs. Bellis visited the 4th and 5th grades Tuesday afternoon.

Tests were held last week as an introduction to the monthly exams.

Geometry classes have finished Book One. They enjoyed the exercises very much.

Mrs. C. E. Lockwood and son Paul visited Miss Pepper's room Wednesday morning.

Ask the chemistry class if they have experienced the pleasure of "chlorine gas" as yet.

New choruses have arrived for the choir. The members of the choir will be given next week.

Exams will be held on Thursday and Friday of this week for the second month which closes the 28th of this month.

The Sophomores have added one more to their number, Stanley A. Webber of the Detroit Central High School having entered the B. H. S. Monday.

The following were perfect in spelling last month in Miss Koontz' room: 6th grade, Don Ferguson; 7th grade, Bertha Kerr, Dwight Potts, Loren Stauch.

The school board has very kindly furnished the B. H. S. with the much needed new matting. Eight pieces of the new are on the floors and is of a very good quality.

The old hydrant which originally stood on the southeast part of the school grounds has been removed. It was of no service to the school, and was no ornament to the grounds.

Thursday afternoon the pupils listened with pleasure to an instrumental duet by Prof. and Mrs. Bellis. The selection, about 15 minutes long, was very well rendered and greatly enjoyed by the pupils.

The English classes are taking up classic study as follows: English 12, Franklin's Autobiography; English 11, Burke's Conciliation; English 10, Addison's Sir Roger De Coverly Papers; English 9, Coleridge's Ancient Mariner.

The class in 10th grade physiology will change texts in the near future. Overton's Advanced which is now in use will be replaced by Blaisdell's Advanced, the lower texts of which are now in use in the lower grades. This change of book will involve no expense to the pupil.

WHAT A BULLFROG WILL EAT.

It Thinks Nothing of Swallowing Birds and Young Ducks.

Many years ago, when collecting birds in southern New England, I shot on the salt marshes a swallow, which fell in a shallow pool in the marsh, says a writer in Forest and Stream. My brother, who happened to be standing near the pool, saw the bird fall and saw a huge bullfrog make two or three sprawling leaps over the mud and through the water and swallow the bird. When I came up the head of the bullfrog remained above water with the wings of the swallow sticking out of the corners of his mouth.

Recently a story was told me by a friend who resides at Flushing, L. I., of certain happenings on a neighbor's place. This neighbor has some water inclosed in which he keeps some domesticated wild fowl, and not long ago, the opportunity occurring to purchase five gigantic bullfrogs, he introduced them into the water.

This spring, as it seemed a possibility that some of his wild duck could breed, an effort was made to get rid of the frogs for fear they might injure the ducklings, and three of them were killed, but the other two could not be found. Some time in May a female pintail duck came off with three young ones which, after two or three days, disappeared and were not seen again. A day or two after their disappearance the missing bullfrogs were seen and killed and in their stomachs were found the remains of the little pintails. I fancy that there is nothing living that a bullfrog will not eat.

WORK DONE BY INVALIDS.

Many Literary Successes Made by Men in Ill Health.

Lots of success has been pulled off by invalids. Parkman, the historian, was a bankrupt in health before he began his life's work. Heine lived in a mattress grave for years. Was it not Pope who spoke of "that long disease my life"? R. L. Stevenson pushed away death with one hand while he wrote and ignited cigarettes with the other. There are hundreds of like instances, but the case most to the point here is that of Mr. Tilden, who always was a valetudinarian, and never had any physical energy to spare. But he had mental energy. That is the main thing. A sound body makes for sanity of mind, but physical energy and mental energy don't always go together.—Harper's Weekly.

Shall I Sing a Simple Song?

Shall I sing a simple song, lady fair?
Just an air
From the Land of Thousand Lakes dear and rare?
Will you dare
Show a tender mien of pity
For the subject of my ditty,
Listning there?

It was free and happy living, lady fair,
Toil and hardship, want and famine, off our share,
But despair
Had no sway in farm or city,
For our hands were hard and gritty—
Made to dare.

We, the people, were our kings, lady fair,
When from out his Eastern haunts, from lair
Crept the Bear,
Stealthy, lasse, sans faith or pity—
Ends our freedom and my ditty!
Empty air!
—Herman Montague Donner, from "English Lyrics of a Finnish Harp."

Gray?

"My hair was falling out and turning gray very fast. But your Hair Vigor stopped the falling and restored the natural color."—Mrs. E. Z. Benomme, Cohoes, N. Y.

It's impossible for you not to look old, with the color of seventy years in your hair! Perhaps you are seventy, and you like your gray hair! If not, use Ayer's Hair Vigor. In less than a month your gray hair will have all the dark, rich color of youth.
