

"Agnaldo is coming to the United States this summer." Who the deuce is Agnaldo?
If any curious person asks you where Shan-Hai-Kwan is, just tell him it's west of Yiu-Kow.

Yucatan is enjoying a greater era of prosperity than ever before in its history. Well, buy gum!

As Colombia has reduced her standing army from 11,000 men to 5,000 this country may breathe easier.

It appears that two newspaper men have bought the Washington baseball club. But where on earth did they?

Tom Lawson of Boston tells of clearing $46,000.00 in one deal. Somebody must have forgotten to get the cards.

"Show me your garden, and I will show you what you are like," Alfred Austin. By Jingo, we'd like to see Alfred's.

Prof. Langley says that with $25,000 more he could fly. Canada has harbored many an American citizen who flew with a less sum.

Robertus Love, a St. Louis poet, thinks of running for Congress. If he can pull the poet's stool he'll be able to ride Pegasus on a walk.

The estate of Mr. Mayor Grace of St. Louis is estimated at $10,000,000.00. And nobody asks disparagingly where he got it.

If the people to whom John L. Sullivan, now sick and penniless, has given money would repay even 10 per cent the ex-emption would be fixed for life.

Now the fashion editors say that no wedding costume will be worn along with a new hat for every month in the year. This is too, too much.

A twelve-inch shell dropped into a city from a distance of seven and one-half miles may be ineffective in a military sense, but is apt to produce general insomnia.

What a woman likes about buying a thing on the installment plan is that if she died before it was paid for she would be that much money in.

The horse is slowly but surely being deprived of his constitutional rights. A court of justice has just decided that he has no right to get scared at an automobile.

A man wants a woman to look like an angel, and yet if she really is an angel clad in her wings and a little rag of cheesecloth he would put her in an insane asylum.

Even the woman most anxious to trespass upon a man's preserves lets him enjoy his life here in peace. The most advanced woman would never stand for a bald head.

A Harvard professor says college students are singularly lacking in imagination. But some of the professors seem overworked with it, so the supply is about normal, after all.

Phoebe, where is the glory of living a century? An animated mummy is more anxious to look up than the majority of us find it hard enough having to rub through half the time.

Men with a system for beating the horse races are always present at each meeting, but they change from year to year. The same old faces are not recognized among the book-makers.

For the protection of the masses, and in order that they may read and affect it on their $100 bills, we will state that the name of the particular state which interests green backs is stymie-cotton.

A Chicago woman makes the assertion that "there are no good husbands but dead ones." The editor who treats it seems to be, when marrying, marry a dead one.—Journal.

A good many do.

The Japanese have not succeeded in getting a single Matanzas mule in all their bombardment of Fort Arthur, one Russian lawyer, who was married as a victim, being as near as they could approximate.

A St. Louis man has killed $2,000 a year to his pet horse. Now, if the horse has found out how to live on two-cent notes, he ought to be able to leave quite a nest egg for his relatives when he dies.

A New York language sharp will soon publish a volume treating the correct use of the prepositions, conjunctions, relative pronouns and adverbs in English speech. We treat it will not overlook the classic question: "When am I at?"

Even if the worthy Marquis of Queensberry has gone into bankruptcy for the fourth time, it is some consolation to know that the rules that bear his family name will control the social conventions of the prize ring performers.

The president of the St. Louis branch of the International Dressmakers' association was the great mistake of announcing that pretty girls aren't good models for trying on purchases because they distract attention from the frocks. Now she can't get any models at all.

If it is true that Mr. Rockefeller thinks of paying $2,000 for an old bull, the relic maker may be depended upon to give the public valuable assistance in the task of separating him from his money.

Happenings of the Week Chronicled Briefly For Busy Readers

Week and Death.
Spreading rails on the Detroit & Bay City branch of the Michigan Central, two miles south of Detroit, last night, resulted in the wrecking of an engine and caboose, the destruction of the latter by fire, and the cremation of Conductor Myron Vandenberg of Detroit. The train consisted only of an engine, locomotive, and engine, besides Vandenberg, the engineer, fireman and brakeman, all of whom jumped at the first sign of trouble and escaped without injury. The wreck occurred at the top of an embankment, and the caboose rolled over the stove was overturned, setting fire to the car and charring the body of the conductor, who was pinned under the wreckage. The track was torn up for several rods, and all traffic over the division stopped temporarily.

A Very Expensive Scheme.
The mayor of Detroit with others talked over the city council Thursday for nearly three hours on the importance of his calling the Michigan legislature special session next fall for the purpose of requiring the Detroit utility law to give the citizens of Detroit three-cent electric energy transfers. It was argued that it was necessary to require the Detroit utility law to give the citizens of Detroit three-cent electric energy transfers. The Water Gains.
Dr. Victor C. Vaughn, of the University of Michigan, has made a series of tests of drinking water and finds that murky water is often safe, but that it is often dangerous. He says that in all cold water there exists only one species of bacteria which is dangerous after being swallowed. The grain other drinking water bacteria are dangerous, but not so dangerous as the one that is most common. It is a clear responsibility, which is found in the water, to keep the water clean.
