FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR

When "resting" yourself give other people a rest.

Don't ask a friend the time even if he has a chain in sight. His watch may also be "resting."

Never glance at a man's feet when he is telling you how he came back from New York in a private car.

Don't let about your salary to non-professional friends. You may need to borrow money from them later on.

W' you get a job on a twentieth-cent piece keep it dark, and tell you are negotiating with Prohm by cable.

Never get too friendly with a man who asks him home to your hair bed; after telling him that you are living at the Windsor-Astoria.

When a friend asks you to have a drink don't stick him for a brandy or a cab soda, and perhaps he will invite you to have rice pudding with him on Sixth Avenue—Town Topics.

He paid me back with the same dollar I loaned him."

"That's strange."

"No, I couldn't pass it either."

Found What He Wanted.

It is always safe to tell a woman how much you love her, even if she knows you do not.

Most people would rather be wrong and argue it than right and have nobody dispute it.

There is nothing that shocks a woman more than to be shocked when her husband sneers.

Either a man finds fault because he has to pay taxes or because he is laughing at a penniless preacher or millionaire—New York Press.

SNAP SHOTS.

The pen-fink of the woman who writes a good example of the lit'rary rack.

How impossible the letter writer is, anger and in haste seems for a case of twenty-four hours!

There's a fortune awaiting the owner who will invent an automobile that is at once useful and become a merrid widow.

Information Wanted.

"Are you going to marry that marvellous" asked five-year-old Margie of her mother up high.

"Yes, dear," was the reply.

"And if he should die," continued Margie, "will you wear seaweeds and be a mermaid widow?"

Fly Fishing.
