INSPIRATIONAL INSTITUTE

Supt. of Public Instruction P. H. Kelley has appointed a two day Inspirational Institute to be held at Pontiac, Oct. 27 and 28. Ex. Supt. Delos Fall, Coordinator, and M. S. W. Jefferson, of the State Normal College, Instructor.

The Pontiac City Schools have consented to close and the teachers will attend in a body. We trust that every other school in the county will do likewise. Let me assure you that the institute will be a success and that the teachers who come to learn, to get inspiration, to associate with successful educators, to obtain higher ideals will never regret the time and money spent.

Be sure and read Sec. 213 of the General School Laws 1903, and tell your Board that you wish to attend the institute. H. S. Elliott, Commissioner of Schools.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

The Lewis & Clark Exposition at Portland, Ore., has proved to be a great attraction to the people of Michigan. Many thousands having gone west to visit it, and to enjoy the beautiful scenery en route. There are many routes to the Pacific Coast, but the consensus of opinion is that the grandest mountain scenery of the world is to be viewed in the Canadian Rockies along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway. In the words of one of our globe trotters, "the Canadian Rockies are equal to fifty or sixty Switzerland rolled into one."

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The State Board of Library Commissioners wishes to announce that through a more generous appropriation of the last legislature, it has been possible to appoint a library organizer, who will act under the direction of the Board in extending the library interests of the state. The work of this organizer will be to visit every county in the state for the purpose of investigating library conditions, getting, so far as possible, correct statistics regarding school, township and public libraries, in order that the aid offered by the state may be better understood and generally accepted. The organizer hopes to visit every county in the state in the next few weeks and under the advice of the county commissioners of schools in their respective counties, whose experience and familiarity with conditions will aid greatly in the work.

The organizer will attend the teachers' institutes, and demonstrate to the teachers the help which is offered to them by the state. Traveling libraries will be explained, all attendant expenses being paid by the Board.

At a meeting of the board held in Saginaw, September 9th, Mr. Roy C. Lyle, of Grand Rapids, was appointed library organizer. Work will commence in October and be active all year. During the school year Mr. Lyle will be at the service of the county commissioners of schools, and will appreciate the valuable aid which they can give him in connection with this important educational work. James B. Peter, Secretary.

Mary C. Spencer, Secretary.

IN IT NO LONGER A REAL PARADISE

CITY HALL STEPS, WITH THE FRINGE TO OUR NEW COURT HOUSE.

A few weeks ago the chief question relative to the court house in Pontiac was, "I wonder why those men are building that concrete curb about the entire lot?"

Our sunny September afternoons have answered it in every respect, and one has only to pass by to see that the curb will soon rival the steps of Detroit's city hall as a resting place for the weary.

Nearly 30 men were counted sitting on the curb one day this week and all seemed to be enjoying themselves perfectly in spite of the fact that the masons built it in a different style than the sea of a chair.

MICHIGAN PRESS' ASSOCIATION ENJOYED IT LAST JUNE.

Through Good Hunting District.

Those members of the Michigan Press Association, who in their tour to the Maritime Provinces last June, traveled over a portion of the Intercolonial railway from St. John, N. B., to Sidney, Cape Breton, were afforded an opportunity to gaze upon scenes of marvelous beauty, and to experience some of the delightful balminess of a summer climate that has rarely been met in any other place of a "Summer Paradise." At the necessity of haste prevented them from enjoying but few of the opportunities that this great Canadian National Highway offers to the tourist and the sportsman.

For instance, in the journey from Montreal to Halifax, Sidney, Cape Breton or to St. John, there are panoramas of marvellous beauty following each other in bewildering sequence. The attractions of such variety that it is hard to specify. There are mountains and valleys, lakes, rivers and streams. There is the valley of the Lower St. Lawrence, that most magnificent of all the world's great waterways. Miles and miles of sea coast are reached where there are numerous watering places. Two splendid through trains, the "Maritime Express," and the "Ocean Limited" between these points, which for excellence of dining and sleeping car service are not excelled on the continent.

It must not be supposed, however, that the Intercolonial possesses the summer attractions. It is when the early frosts of September are turning to golden the forest foliage, that one of its chief attractions is brought into prominence. It is then that the woods are crowded with sportsmen hurrying to the woods after the moose, caribou, deer and bear.

The splendid hunting along the line of railway is one of the railway's great advantages. It is considered so valuable an asset that the trade mark of a moose head is placed on the railway's publications on hunting issued by the railway. The route is through districts where moose, caribou and deer are found in amazing numbers, where the black bear is still to be seen in the wild, and where smaller game is correspondingly abundant. In parts of Quebec Province, close to the line of railway, are the favorite hunting grounds of many western sportsmen. From the moment the guide crosses the boundary of Ontario into New Brunswick the finest moose hunting territory in the world is within easy reach. For over a hundred and fifty miles any of the stations can be made a starting point for the woods.

Although the moose does not enjoy the same reputation as other Provincial game, for moose, this is by no means due to the scarcity of the animals. There are several sections where not only are they very numerous, but of fine size and splendidly antlered.

The open seasons for big game differ materially in Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. In Quebec the season is from September 1st to October 31st. In New Brunswick it is from September 1st to November 30th. In Nova Scotia it is from October 1st to January 31st. The license fee in Quebec is $25 for non-residents, in New Brunswick $50, and in Nova Scotia $50. One bull moose is allowed to be shot in a season by any one hunter. It is a very serious offense to kill a female. In New Brunswick a stag caribou may be shot under the same license and two deer.

There are few branches of sports more thrilling than hunting the moose. Quiet as a timid deer during the summer months, the moose becomes an uncertain quantity in September, when the anxious call of the cow moose resounds through the forest, and the mating season begins. Prior to the rutting season it is the habit of the bull moose to establish himself in a chosen district of the forest, preferably near a lake or pond. Having taken up his station there he will bravely resist any invasion of his chosen realm. He wants a kingdom all his own and by no means averse to contesting for supremacy with all comers. Many the desperate battles that are waged in the heart of the woods, few of which are ever witnessed by human eyes.

Most of the hunting in New Brunswick is done by calling the moose and in this the moose is a most cunning animal. The "challenge" of a rival male is perfectly imitated, or the plaintive love call of the female. Early in the season the guides prefer the "challenge" as it rarely fails to bring a response from the bull that has consented to follow the hunter into the woods in the vicinity. Later on when the mating season is well advanced the call of the cow moose is the better lure.

Hon. F. G. Harris, State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, who hunted in the Miramichi woods last season, writes in a description of this style of moose hunting:

"This is the challenge that Bering gave through the birch bark horn, on the evening of his hunt. Using his horn as a trumpet, Bering called to the moose that a bull was answering. The trained ear and eye of the New Brunswick guide can detect the presence of game where the amateur can not. He had heard the crackling of some brush, or the smacking of the bull's horns against the wall before I was able to hear him. In the course of fifteen to twenty minutes the bull came nearer, and during this time that grew with whom he was mating was endeavoring to call him away. We could hear his call back on the ridge and could plainly hear the bull as he approached the pond, crashing through the forest ready to meet his antagonist. Just as I saw his head antlers were poked out of the alder thicket directly opposite from where we sat concealed, and about a hundred yards away. I do not know that I ever had the luck before, but I certainly had a thrill that evening: for four hours and did not move from my position, and the weather was so cold that ice was freezing on the pond.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

"I shivered like a leaf, and when I heard that bull moose crashing through the brush, approaching the pond, I confessed that I was just a little excited. I wanted to shoot the moose as he stood with his head and antlers up, trying to discover the whereabouts of the bull he thought had challenged him, but Bering kept his hand on my arm and told me in a whisper that he would give me the shot. In the course of a few minutes, the bull made a sudden start and went back into the woods, whistling and exclaiming, 'Give it to him! I jumped to my feet, fired at the moose's breast with my 32 Winchester Special, and just as I touched the trigger the bull lowered his head and I shot him in the forehead between the eyes. The bullet struck him in the open and the blood spurted from his nostrils. He wailed in his tracks and I shot him a second time in the neck, the bullet passing through his lungs and clear through his body. He disappeared into the dark woods and we crossed the pond some three hundred yards above, following his trail into the thicket and found him standing a hundred yards from where we had shot, sick and dying. A shot through his heart finished him, and we left him until morning."

Some hunters will stoutly maintain that a moose will not attack a man, but there are so many instances to the contrary that it is impossible to doubt that the bull under certain conditions are vicious enough to introduce into the hunt just enough of the element of danger to make the pastime highly exciting. A wounded moose is always bad and owing to the small bore rifles carried by so many hunters, there is often a lot of fight left in one after it has received a fatal wound.

The writer knows of instances where the animals have, without provocation, charged hunters, and has in mind the case of one man last season who was obliged to kill a moose to save himself from death or serious injury.

One of the principal reasons why the New Brunswick woods are the objective point of so many sportsmen, is because of the close proximity of the best hunting territory to the line of railway. At Campbellton near the Quebec line, the hunters start for the woods and in from two to three hours are at the best moose and caribou grounds. From Bathurst also, a section that is fairly alive with game can be reached in a very short time. It is possible to drive right to the camp, and of a hard wearisome hard tramping is avoided. This same may be said of other stations in this vicinity, viz., Newcastle, Charlo, Baribouche, Kent Jct., etc.

The Fredericton section of the Intercolonial is a chosen district of the forest. Experienced caribou hunters prefer the barrens of Newfoundland, where the beasts are of larger size and antler development. Every year large numbers of Western sportsmen journey to the Island Colony, and the favorite route is from Montreal to North Sydney, where connection is made with the steamers of the Reid Newfoundland Co., which in turn connect with the Reid Railway. But it must not be remembered that there is a splendid caribou hunting in Quebec and New Brunswick, and the moose and caribou are to be found in the same sections. Some fine caribou have lately been shot in New Brunswick and they are very plentiful.

Other than the game above mentioned, and wild fowl amazingly so in November when they assemble for their annual flight southward to a more congenial winter climate. Thus it will be seen that the attractions of the Eastern Provinces of Canada are by no means confined to the summer months. It is the Sportsman's Paradise in the autumn, right up to the beginning of winter.

Gold and Silver in Burma. Gold and silver are known to exist in the province of Burma.
