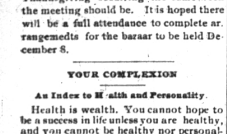
YOUR COMPLEXION

An Index to Health and Personality.

Health is wealth. You cannot hope to be a success in life unless you are healthy, and you cannot be healthy nor personally attractive unless you live sensibly and follow health rules. One of the secrets of remaining youthful is simplicity. Nearly all facial blemishes like pimples and blackheads are caused by some error in diet, but it is comparatively easy to be rid of these facial defects if you keep the pores of the skin open by soft hot water face baths at night, and rubbing vigorously with a coarse cloth or Turkish bath towel. Perfect beauty means perfect health. Everything conducive to your general health should be striven for with untiring persistence. The greatest enemy of a good complexion is constipation. The one remedy that will cure constipation, biliousness, dizzy spells, sick headache, and insure a clear, velvety skin is Laxiloh Tonic Tablets. They open the pores, enrich the blood, stimulate the liver, encourage the action of the bowels and assist nature to do its own work. Whitehead & Mitchell or Cobb & Cobb will pay your 25 cents back unless you receive the benefits expected.



The Kaiser has sent a medal to a Brandenburg woman, who has had twins three times. She herself is a twin, and her mother gave birth to four sets of twins.

The Duke of Wellington paid his rent of the Strathfieldsaye estates to King Edward on June 18, the anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo. The rent consists of a small French flag.

The British Deaf and Dumb Association met at Bowness, England, recently and the district was placarded: "Motor Cars and Cyclists Beware—a deaf and dumb congress is being held this week."

The Empress of Russia is so catholic in her taste for perfumes that she vaporizes the royal apartments daily with the concentrated essences of lilac, jasmine, narcissus, jonquil, tuberose and white violets.

The body of a Tyrolese guide, who fell into a crevasse on the glacier of Grossvenediger in the Austrian Alps thirty years ago, has been found in a remarkable state of preservation at the foot of the glacier.

The South American negroes have a queer way of decorating the graves of their dead friends. It is the custom down there to make a border around the grave of the medicine bottles used during the dead one's last illness.

At a recent parliamentary election in Carlisle, England, one of the candidates was named Chance. His placards read: "Give Carlisle a Chance." Those of his opponent's read: "Take no Chances —Vote for Sanderson." But the electors took a Chance.

Two stamps were once put into an olfactory box by a lady in Georgetown, according to the Philadelphia Ledger. They were two-cent stamps, issued in British Guiana, in 1850. The lady had come across an envelope among her papers bearing two of these stamps. The incumbent, Canon Joss, sold the envelope, with the two stamps on it, at auction, and it realized $1000.

Newspaper English.

None need be afraid of spoiling their taste for good English by reading newspapers. The articles are almost always delightfully free from stiltedness and trite conventionality, which is more than can be said of the average collegian's allusions.—President Wilson, of Princeton.

Green Isle of Erin

Ramble Through the Cities and Fields of the Gem of the Northern Ocean

(Special Correspondence.)

Dublin is a sort of Washington city for Ireland, and when parliament is in session it gathers together there its "beauty and its chivalry," and it is said that gayety reigns supreme. During our stay we turned our attention to the city itself and found it satisfactory. The river Liffey cuts the town in two, and the public buildings, which compare favorably with any in the kingdom, are on either side of the stream. The streets are broad and well paved and the mansions and rows, as the residences are called, are well built, and many of them magnificent. One of the most attractive things about the entire country over here is the moss-covered walls that shut out the public everywhere.

If any one likes looking through fine buildings, the royal exchange, Christ Church cathedral, the four courts, custom house, postoffice or national gallery, all of which are splendid buildings, will repay any interest taken or effort made—and one gets the "glad hand" in any of them, for the Irish people like Americans, and believe in demonstrating it while we are alive.

The Nelson pillar is 121 feet high. If you climb up you will be very glad of it afterward, for the view is very fine. The Wicklow hills, and the coast line, away below Bray's head, are easily discerned, and Dublin bay is wonderfully beautiful from there.

I looked in upon 20 Merrian row, where the duke of Wellington was born, and in the royal academy saw Patrick's bell and many other antiquities, drove through Phoenix park, and left Dublin with more regret than a year ago, but with a hope that I might make another "farewell visit."

For natural loveliness of scenery, mixed with stories of interest and unfailing charm, there is nothing in Ireland to surpass the tour to the lakes of Killarney, no matter which route one takes. At this season it is simply glorious. The hay is being stacked and small grains threshed out, and the golden fields and green pastures, alternating with fields of vegetables and flowers, with the hills covered with the heather in full bloom, presents a mosaic, and whether seen from car, coach top or carriage window, is like a moving picture, and for real beauty could not be exceeded anywhere. It is so replete with scenic charm that it cannot be described within the limits of an ordinary letter, but as some one has said, "It is a good thing to use your eyes" incessantly.

The Weather in Ireland.

The weather over here is very much like we have at home—at times—and we have seen the beauties of Ireland in a pouring rain, many times "chilled to the bone," hungry and cross, but we were nearly always jostled into a good humor, and our interest always exceeded any discomfort. The drive from Killarney to Glengariff is the finest in "his majesty's dominions," 'tis said, and 'tis true, for here nature has been lavish with its gifts and beauty confronts one everywhere. Upon the surface of the water the mountains are reflected, and upon the hills some ruin, with its ages of moss and ivy, recalls the tales of the O'Sullivans and O'Learys, and the whole scene is rich with associations, adventure and daring.

Not once have I been permitted to pay for a glass of milk during my pilgrimage. And this despite the fact, which would be detected by these shrewd folk, even did I not openly avow that I hail from the land where gold is supposed to be picked up in the streets. Finding it hurt their pride to offer payment, I ask for water instead, but this device rarely avails, as milk is almost invariably given me, sometimes on the plea that their water is not very good.

Activity of Cork.

The county of Cork certainly lives up to one's expectations of it and seems to be rolling in plenty and improving in many ways. The whole county of Cork is under one government, the city of Cork being the center, and the lord mayor the head of the town council. It is the best lighted town in the kingdom and has a splendid street car service, from which we conclude that the two members of parliament from Cork represented their constituency tolerably well, as well as improved their own properties. Cork grows rapidly and is an up-to-date town. Queen's college, overlooking the sea, has an imposing situation. The building is after the old Tudor style and the residents of Cork are very proud of this fine old school. It is open to all without reference to their religion and embraces, besides the elementary branches of study, those of the classics, science, law, medicine and engineering, and has excellent apartments and halls for study.

We drove out to Blarney and while others of the party explored the castle and sought the far-famed stone I walked about the village and sought an opportunity to get a look into a real typical Irish kitchen, which is the whole thing when one speaks of an Irish home.

Typical Irish Kitchen.

From the ceiling a cage hung and a bird twittered in a friendly tone, exchanging greetings with a hen that had brought her "brood of broilers" up out of the rain, and with them had huddled together in the middle of the place. There was an old picture on one side of the wall, as black as a Rembrandt and as homely as Henry

Open-Handed Hospitality.

VIII, which my hostess assured me was "her great-great-grandfather," who had once been "keeper of the keys of the castle" in the time of the MacCarthys. The story was interestingly told and all suited the place.

I shall not soon forget that old kitchen. The fireplace and old warped fender and bits of smoldering peat and the queer-looking little black pots, an old "dealtable," a wooden bench, a low stool or two and the bit of muslin curtain stretched across the one window, and the hen and her chickens chattering so sociably in the middle of the floor, made a homely picture. I inquired "where they slept" and was told that the beds were put under the floor usually, but when it was "wet" they made "other arrangements," and in a tone without a shade of discontent.

A Tokyo Riot Legend.

Who was the "mysterious individual" who took such a prominent part in the recent riots in Tokyo? Reports from that city while the riots were in progress mentioned him frequently, but his identity remains a secret. A Tokyo paper says: "He has been described by several eye-witnesses as a man of mature years—some say old—wearing a beard and dressed in a costume which betokened easy circumstances. The course pursued by him would seem to have been part of a regularly organized scheme.

"He would ride in a jinrikisha to the neighborhood of a police box and there blow on a flute which he carried in his sleeve. At this signal several men and youths would run up and attack the police box, and after its destruction the flute player, having handed out two or three bundles of banknotes, would ride on to the next police box and repeat the performance.

"Very likely this cryptic figure has been embellished by rumor with attributes which it did not possess, but there seems to be very little room for doubt that such a leader contributed largely to the method which informed the destructive mood of the mob."

Might Do.

"I've perfected a scientific system of making people glad," announced the man with the high forehead. "By my method the most depressing attack of the blues may be dispelled within ten minutes, and all cases of melancholy, unhappiness, and similar afflictions can be eradicated quickly. But the trouble is I don't know what name to give my profession. I want a word that will tell the whole store at a glance.

"Why not," asks the man with the discouraged whiskers, "why not call yourself a cheerupodist?"

Perverse Logic.

"Speakin of wasted opportunities," said Plodding Pete, "dere goes a man wit a hundred thousand dollars in de bank."

"He ain't losin' many chances," responded Meandering Mike.

"Figger it out. Calc'late de beer dat a hundred thousand would buy. Every nickel in it is a wasted opportunity."

WHITNEY

"My Tomboy Girl", a spectacular and sensational comedy drama from the pen of Chas. Blaney, which serves to introduce Miss Lottie Williams in a new vehicle, will be the offering at the Whitney next week, beginning Sunday afternoon. The play was written especially to fit the wide capabilities of the versatile little comedienne. It is a charming comedy-drama in four acts and fourteen elaborate scenes, and tells a story replete with dramatic force, striking situations, refreshing comedy; tender and touching pathos, and is a play of absorbing and enlivening interest. Its plot is one of sufficient complication to hold the attention of the audience in the unraveling of the fine story, and yet to still permit room for excellent comedy and the best musical numbers and specialties in the theatrical world. A cast of half a hundred brilliant people increases the value of the play, which teems with action and sensational episodes.

Matinees daily, except on Wednesday.

LYCEUM

Miss "Nancy Brown," the diplomatic, effervescent, always hustling matrimonial agent, whose business it is to marry off American heiresses to titled noblemen of the orient will hold forth at the Lyceum next week, commencing Sunday evening with a bevy of beauties at the Court of the Boy of Ballyhoo, and there will be some highly amusing doings as the result of her efforts at match making. "Miss Brown" will be impersonated by Miss Mary Marble, the daintiest little comedienne on the American stage and her support will be a company of fifty talented players, most of whom are dashing girls who appear to good advantage in stunning gowns and amid lavish scenic adornment. The plot of the play deals with the up-to-date craze of American girls of wealth wedding foreign titles and usually worthless husbands, and complications and intricacies resulting are laughable to the extreme, yet the comedy is consistent and there is a valid and reasonable excuse for all that occurs. The song hits are numerous and catchy. Matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday with a special performance Thursday afternoon, Thanksgiving Day.
