Then Caras for Young Kittens.
Citions of McKenzie, Trum, are amused at a strange display of affection displayed by an ordinary barnyard hen for a litter of newborn kittens. At the home of Squire N. W.
Perkins the hen left be nest and on return found four kittens. She took charge of the nest, as though the kittens were not there, evidently imagmay have been as the control of the conscene by a terrific fight being waged by the hen and the mother of the kittens. The hen was holding possession of the nest when Perkins interfered and restored the kittens to their mother.
