

STRICKER A GOOD BLUFFER.

Quaker City Fan Lozes Mower on Second basement's Clever Antics. There's a close-up on Cub Stricker, who played second base for the Athletics when they won the pennant in 1883.

"Cub is a great player," I said to my friend coming down for the Athletics. "Greatest bluffer, you mean," he replied sullenly. "How so?" I asked, pretty well stirred up.

"I couldn't get up $5 fast enough, I was so indignant. After snogging we came down to the Havana and stayed up Stricker. I was very, very enthusiastic over my first triumph. "See, Stricker! I said trying to question fair and not ask a single question—how many of these five base stealers did you really touch today?"

"You're mistaken," said the superintendent. "When you came the second night, you got only $2, and this is the balance due you." "All right, governor," replied the jack tar, "but you believe it? I had just $50, which fun on that $2 as if it had been $50."

"Did you advertise for a job?" "Yes. Have you answered the advertisement?" "Well, I'd like to know what you mean by saying you want a boy who ain't afraid of work." "It's plain enough, isn't it?" "Oh, he'll be in, but I should think if you'd rather have a boy that's afraid of work, just enough afraid of it to catch hold of it quick and steady with it, and down it and down it, and get it down and show it that it won't get a chance to prove too much for him."
